Gov. proclaims June dairy month

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

HARRISBURG — With a large container of milk placed symbolically on his desk and a red and white "Real Seal" gracing his suit, Governor Thornburgh signed a proclamation, Thursday, designating June as dairy month — now in its 46th consecutive year.

It's only fitting that we sign this once again this year because a few weeks ago milk became the state's official drink," he declared before the signing.

Gov Thornburgh was referring to H.B. 1351, which he signed on Tuesday, May 4, proclaiming that, 'Milk is hereby selected, designated and adopted as the offical beverage of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania "

The governor took the opportunity to remind those gathered for the signing that, "Pennsylvania is proud of its dairy industry which not only offers nutritious food products, but also contributes to our economic growth by providing quality products and a steady source of jobs for our citizens.

"The Commonwealth's 15,000 dairy farms annually produce more than four billion quarts of milk valued at $1 2 billion dollars, and we rank among the top five states in the nation in the number of dairy farms and dairy cows, as well as in the quantity of milk produced, marketed and sold for processing. Truly, our dairy families, milk processors and livestock breeders are helping Pennsylvania agriculture grow better," he stated

Following the signing, Gov Thornburgh drank from the milk-filled giant brandy snifter to audience applause, and as though it were his own personal trademark to the now traditional task, he uttered an approving sigh and offered the onlookers a giant smile More applause followed

In attendance for the signing were Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell, State Dairy Princess Charlene Rohrer, and several representatives from the state's dairy industry

U.S. ag committee reviews dairy ideas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A 10-person U.S. agriculture subcommittee on agricultural production, marketing and stabilization of prices convened Thursday for the last time before the Memorial Day recess to hear responses to the emergency dairy plan, recently proposed by U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block.

Closer to home, a three-man teller committee began counting milkerendum ballots early this week. Follow the progress of the state Milk Marketing Program beginning on page A46.

According to John Cozart, spokesman for U.S. Senate ag chairman Jesse Helms (R — N.C), more than 100 people, including legislators and dairy leaders, attended Thursday's hearing. By request, Senator Helms recently introduced the secretary's proposal now dubbed S. 2533.

Under Block's plan, designed to reduce record surplus levels, the U S. Agriculture Secretary would exercise complete authority in setting the dairy price support. If enacted, Block said he would not adjust the support level until January 1, 1983. Without the legislation, USDA anticipates spending almost $2 billion this year in dairy supports.

Additionally, the secretary's plan includes eight provisions which do not need congressional approval While most dairy groups have gone on record in oppostion of any agriculture secretary retaining complete authority, a number have supported several of Block's provisions, such as extending milk markets in domestic and foreign trade and raising the standards of fluid milk, to name a few. For a complete review of Block's emergency dairy plan refer to Lancaster Farming May 8, 1982 issue.

Congressman Rudy Boschwitz informed the subcommittee that very soon he will introduce the National Milk Producers' Federation self-help plan into the legislature. Cozart admitted that many who participated in Thursday's hearings expressed support toward the NMPF two-part program.

The NMPF Price Stabilization provision, based on a beginning year estimated surplus level, is a two-tier pricing system administered by a dairy advisory board in consultation with the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

For example, if the national surplus is estimated at 10 percent, farmers would receive full market price for 90 percent of their milk. The remaining 10 percent will recieve a reduced price, related to the world market price. The difference between the two prices will be collected into a fund to purchase a portion of milk not used in federal programs.

Time for dairy month

LANCASTER — Every sweep of the second hand brings us closer to June Dairy Month and our big salute to the dairy industry in the June 5 issue.

But there's plenty of time left for our annual Dairy Photo Contest. We're getting a first hand look and dairy life through the lens of amateur photographers.

Contest winners can receive up to $50 for a first-place entry and we'll announce the lucky winner in our July 3 issue. Entries should be postmarked no later than June 23. Our photo judges Newton Bair, Lebanon County dairy agent and Art and Jane Myers, professional photographers are looking forward to many fine photos.

The contest will include three categories: Dairy Farms, a dairy farm in a scenic setting; Dairy Partners, dairy animals together with their favorite people; and Dairy Life, unposed photos of events as they happen on a dairy farm.

To assist you in this year's contest, you'll find our handy entry blank on page A35. So keep those entries coming and let's put your farm, cattle, goats and friends on the pages of Lancaster Farming.

Right-to-Farm ready for signing

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — In a flurry of activity, the House members here at the Capitol moved a number of key agricultural bills one step closer to becoming law. Included in this week's action were the Right to Farm bill, House Bill 1823, and the Milk Identification bill, Senate Bill 1349.

With a vote of 185-1, HB 1823 received the final approval it needed from the House before beginning its journey to the Governor's desk. The House members voted to concur with the amendments to the Right to Farm bill made by the Senate. It is expected the Governor will sign the bill into law sometime next week

Introduced by Lancaster's Noah Wenger and 28 other sponsors last September, the Right to Farm bill's progress through the legislature was hampered by lobbying efforts of the Association of Township Supervisors.

Now, as it undergoes the final scrutiny of the governor, the Right to Farm bill stands ready to protect farmers from nuisance suits and ordinances as long as they are carrying out normal farming operations. No nuisance actions can be brought against an existing agricultural operation or an expansion which has lawfully been in operation for one year or more

With the final signing of HB 1823 into law, it will be Pennsylvania's official policy to 'conserve and protect and encourage the development and improvement of its agricultural land for the production of food and other agricultural products."

With the ever increasing trend for people from nonfarm backgrounds to venture into the country, the state legislators have realized the increasing social pressures brought to bear on farmers.

"When nonagricultural land uses extend into agricultural areas, agricultural operations often become the subject of nuisance suits and ordinances. As a result agricultural operations are sometimes forced to cease operations Many others are discouraged from making investments in farm improvements It is the purpose of this act to reduce the loss to the Commonwealth of its agricultural resources by limiting the cir-

Pennfield's New Baby Pig Feed Will Maximize Your Gains!

Pigs weaned at three weeks of age need special care and nutrition to minimize the stress of early weaning. That's why Pennfield developed 603 Pig Power, formulated for better digestibility, palatability and nutrition. It is composed of selected, highly refined ingredients that minimize the stress of going from a whole milk diet to a dry feed.

Pig Power produces excellent gains, superior feed conversion, and more uniform pigs, and produces a better skin color and hair color.

We thoroughly tested our new feed in the field. Take a look at the outstanding results. →

At Pennfield, we can show you the way to increase your productivity and achieve peak performance. Ask your Pennfield representative or call today for more information on Pennfield's swine feeding program.

Memorial Day or "hayday"?

Memorial Day christens the long-awaited summer season with picnics, swimming pool parties, and parades.

But for most farm kids, Memorial Day memories aren't filled with these kinds of fun. Instead, our hard-working parents convinced us that a day spent making hay was the best possible way to observe this national holiday.

While all our other school friends were busy enjoying themselves at the park or in the pool, we 'lucky' few who lived on farms were equally busy raking, stacking, and sweating. Somehow, we never were the envy of our peers.

Occassionally, the innate salesmanship ability that seems to come to farm kids had a way of working in our favor, though. With only slight exageration, we'd broadcast the great muscle-building, weight losing benefits of spending the day in a sweltering hay mow. Sometimes we'd be so convincing, we'd sell the "townies" into a day on the farm — for physical fitness, of course. Unfortunately, these types of sales usually worked only once. After one day on the farm, most town kids never wanted to come back for a second bout with "hayrobics."

The constant struggle to find helping hands was usually fruitless, however. Speaking from experience, about the only kids who were "conned" into blistered hands and aching backs thanks to overweight hale bales were the ones who woke up every morning in the farmer's house.

Some good things did come out of those holidays spent haying. For instance, we farm kids kicked off the summer season with great tans — a little uneven though, thanks to T-shirts and longs pants that were the armor needed to protect limbs from the prickling hay stems and occassional poison ivy leaves.

We also learned the basics of assembly-line manufacturing. One kid on the wagon, one at the elevator, and one in the hay mow was the ideal. But occassionally we learned how to improvise and "cut costs" by eliminating the elevator person. That allowed two people in the mow — one to pitch bales and the other to stack — and helped the wagon person to develop better aim and timing, accuracy needed to drop hay bales into the narrow mouth of an elevator

By the end of the day, as we neared exhaustion, it was always a time for celebration when we saw Dad heading in the farm lane pulling the last wagon behind the baler. That was a signal that our work detail was almost over and there might still be time to take a swim or play some volleyball. How great that water would feel on tired, aching muscles after the initial pain that is felt when scratched arms and legs are emersed.

But, nine times out of ten, just as we were climbing down out of the mountain of hay for the day, black, ominous clouds would roll across the horizon and put the final damper on our holiday spirits. Dodging raindrops in a mad dash to the house, we would have to forget about our chance to play until all the house windows were battened down.

While most folks wish for bright, sunny holidays, there were times when we all had the fleeting naughtiness to wish for a "harmless" drizzle. The damp weather might "rain on everybody else's parade," but it also would put an end to the day's haymaking efforts without ruining the crop. Then we could watch the twirling batons instead of the spinning rake teeth, and hear the beat of the drum instead of the pounding of the baler.

For all our complaining about Memorial Days on the farm — itchy, sweaty, sun-stroke holidays — most of us farm kids wouldn't trade them for the any other way of life. It's just one of the dues we pay for the enumerous joys that life on the farm brings, not only on holidays but everyday.

Just recently we received a letter from two young students who would like to experience life on the farm — an American farm. The two students are in their third year at an agricultural college in France. They write

"Between the third and fourth year, we have the possibility of taking a sabbatical year. During this year, we decide to discover the states and especially the U.S. agriculture. So we would like to work in an American farm or in an associated business during several weeks."

Perhaps they wouldn't mind helping with the haying next Memorial Day. Heaven knows, we all could use some extra hands around the farm. They could improve their English, and we could learn French.

If you'd be interested in giving two students a taste of U.S. farm life, why not drop a line to Mr Picard, G. and Mr. Aubry, J.F., 24 Rue Aug-Fonteneau, 49044, Angers Cedex, France.

Background Scripture:
Revelation 21 through 22
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 11:25-30.

There is a sobering warning at the end of John's Revelation (22:18,19) that no one should miss:

I want everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book; if anyone adds to them, God will add to him the plagues described in this book, and if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God will take away his share in the tree of life and in the holy city, which are described in this book.

It is a warning, not only to those who would literally take away or add words, but those who would use words to make the prophecy say something that John's angel did not intend.

ALL THINGS NEW

But that leaves us with a tremendous problem, doesn't it? For the Book of Revelation is the most difficult to understand of all the books of the Bible. It literally begs us for interpretation. What is meant by the vision of "a new heaven and a new earth"? Where shall we find the "new" Jerusalem? Here on earth or in heaven? And where is it that "God will wipe away every tear from their eyes, and death shall be no more, neither shall there be mourning nor crying nor pain any more..." and when will "the former things have passed away?"

Furthermore, through John's Revelation Christ promises us, "Behold, I am coming soon." But how soon is soon? For almost 2,000 years Christians have been predicting that the Second Coming was right around the corner. But here we are in the year of 1982 and "I am coming soon" cannot mean what some of Christ's followers thought it meant. Do these words still have something to say to us?

I must confess that I have trouble with much of the Book of Revelation. John's visions confuse me in the same manner that my dreams confuse me sometimes. The pictures are fleeting, ever-changing and the symbolism could mean many things. Yet, like my dreams, the visions of John can convey a message even if I don't understand the complex pictures themselves.

COME, LORD JESUS

I really do not have to know the location of the "new heaven" and "new earth." I do not have to understand the symbolism of the timetable for the fulfillment of God's plan. I do not have to recognize all the beasts and figures in Revelation—or any. All of these details are like trees in a vast forest and I must not miss the forest for the trees. I do not know when, how or where all these things shall come to pass, but I can continue to hold fast to my discipleship in Christ in a darkened world convinced that the world is still in God's hands and will eventually become what he created it to be.

"Coming soon" may mean tomorrow or millennia from now. It matters not so long as I know Who is coming and what He means to me.

To Fertilize Alfalfa

Alfalfa is an important crop in our livestock program and every effort should be taken to maintain a healthy stand. This would include top-dressing, at least once a year, with phosphorus-potash fertilizer to replenish the roots with these two major elements.

A very good time to make this application is after the removal of the first cutting. A well fertilized stand of alfalfa can withstand insects and other abuses much better than one lacking fertilization.

Keep in mind that the first cutting of alfalfa removes about one-half of the tonnage produced on an acre for the year, so a lot of plant food is used up in the first cutting.

To Check Corn Fields for Weed Control

Much of the corn that was planted during the first two weeks of May is now showing weed problems. The conditions were excellent for planting, warm and dry, so a lot of the herbicides that were applied were not activiated in the dry soil. Then the rains started during the last part of May, bringing the corn and the weeds along.

At this time, we suggest you take a walk through your corn fields to determine if the weeds are being controlled or not. If weeds are actively growing, then consider spraying with a herbicide. Depending on the kind of weed involved, broadleaf or grass weeds, use Bladex or Atrazine plus oil or surfactant or Banvel or Basagram.

Post-emergence weed control herbicides must be safe to use on corn and be applied according to precautions on the label.

To Be Aware of Ticks

The tick season is here. These pests may be on almost any dog or person that walks through uncultivated fields or woody areas from May to September.

Ticks await their victims on low-growing shrubs and on tall grass.

They attach to, and feed on the blood of dogs, humans as well as many other animals.

There are two common kinds of ticks, the American dog tick and the brown dog tick. Both are brown, but the American dog tick has a mottled white shield on its back. The brown dog tick is a household pest and cannot survive our winter outdoors.

To control the American dog tick, first clean the area of tall grass and weeds on which the ticks await their victims. Also treat bushes 20 to 30 feet on either side of paths with either Sevin, Diazinon or Lindane. The dog should also be treated with a 5% Sevin dust at weekly intervals or as needed for control of either the American dog tick or the brown dog tick.

To Check Water Supplies

Water is one of our most important resources, but it should be checked periodically. Many families depend on wells for their water supply. But they pay little attention to the water unless the pump fails or the well runs dry. Your water should be tested periodically to determine its quality.

It is important to test water following any reconstruction or addition to the water supply or its distribution system. Then the system should be checked once a year for continued safety. Water supplies should be checked whenever a disease occurs that may have been caused by unsafe drinking water. If water changes in taste, odor or appearance for no apparent reason, it should be tested.

There are many tests and analyses that can be used. Two of the most important tests for well water are nitrates and bacteria.

Omaha Cattle

Thursday, May 27
Report supplied by USDA

CATTLE: Through midweek slaughter steers and heifers 1.00-1.50 lower. A 4.00-5.00 break in carcass prices, beginning late in previous week's trading, precipitated the first lower weekly trend in two months. Overall finish again just fair, as many feeders continue to market cattle ahead of schedule. Consequently heavier weight Choice steers and heifers experienced the best, of what was usually, a cautious and selective demand. A late week recovery in the beef trade was not reflected in terminal trading. Cows .50-1.00 lower.

Steers made up 52 pct of the week's receipts; heifers 22 pct.; cows 9 pct.; feeders 5 pct. four day receipes 11747, last week 11813, year ago 10662.

STEERS: On Thursday load Choice, some Prime 2-4 1346 lbs. 76.00. At Wednesday's close Choice 2-4 1075-1250 lbs. 73.00-74.50. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 1050-1200 lbs. 71.50-73.00 Good 69.00-71.50. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 1225-1350 lbs. holsteins 64.50-66.50. Good 63.00-64.50.

HEIFERS At the close two loads Choice 2-3 908-945 lbs. 73.00-73.50. Choice 2-4 950-1050 lbs. 71.00-72.00. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 875-1050 lbs. 68.00-71.00. Good 64.50-68.00.

Average of LS-214 detailed quotations for Choice 900-1100 lbs. steers 72.50; 1100-1300 lbs. 74.10. Average cost steers 72.93, average weight 1125 lbs. as compared 73.10 and 1143 lbs. last week. Average cost heifers 70.74, average weight 972 lbs. as compared 70.75 and 990 lbs. a week ago.

COWS: High Cutter, Utility and Commercial 1-3 43.00-44.25, some high dressing to 45.00. Cutter 38.50-43.00. Canner and low Cutter 36.00-38.50.

BULLS: 1-2 1100-1800 lbs. 48.00-52.00

Farmer investment expands soybean markets

WEST POINT, Mo. — In difficult times like these, farmers can not afford to relax checkoff funded commodity promotion efforts, says soybean farmer Ralph Weems. As vice president for Market Development on the American Soybean Association Board of Directors, Weems keeps a close watch on soybean exports and ASA's worldwide effort to promote increased soybean use.

"Soybean demands have been slowed by several economic factors including the Soviet embargo, worldwide economic recession, increased value of the dollar, high interest rates and competition from other nations," explains Weems.

He urges soybean farmers not be discouraged however, pointing out that soybean checkoff funds are being invested this year in 200 soybean export building projects in 76 countries.

"These activities are aimed at selling soybeans today and keeping U.S. soybeans high on the shopping list of prospective customers," says Weems. "Without such promotional efforts, the current downturn in price would be much worse."

As an example of current promotional work being conducted by the American Soybean Association, Weems cites an educational and promotional effort to increase European livestock farmers' use of soybeans in the form of full-fat soybeans.

Produced by crushing and heat treating whole soybeans, full-fat soybean meal is fed to livestock and poultry without removing the oil. In addition to certain nutritional advantages for poultry and livestock, a major advantage of full-fat soybeans to processors is that the soybean oil never comes to market, thus maintaining soybean sales without increasing oil supplies.

To date, ASA has conducted an intensive education and promotion program for livestock and poultry producers in the United Kingdom, France and Italy. The program includes feeding trails with poultry and hog farms and educational seminars for farmers and fed manufacturers to introduce the concept. The trials successfully showed better feed efficiency, lower mortality and improved carcass grades in animals fed full-fat soybeans.

Since the start of ASA's program, consumption of full-fat soybeans in the EEC increased in one year from under 10 million bushels to over 15 million bushels. Projections are that full-fat soybean utilization will increase to 180 million bushels by 1985.

How much soybean oil does this mean will not hit the market? In 1980 the use of full-fat soybeans represented 169 million pounds of oil. By 1985, the use of full-fat soybeans is expected to represent almost 2 billion pounds of soybean oil that will be used in feeds instead of increasing the glut of edible oil. That's equivalent of soybean oil production from approximately 6.6 million acres of soybeans.

The full-fat project is an example of how farmer investment in the soybean checkoff program helps create new exports for U.S. soybeans.

Growers probe economics of strawberry production

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

BIGLERVILLE — No fruit crop requires more intensive labor per acre than strawberries, reported Marshall Ritter, Penn State pomologist and research specialist.

"Research calculates the costs (of strawberry production) to be from $1,200 to $2,000 per acre," he noted. "But, with runner placement, clipping the blossoms on young plants, water, and enough sunny days, you can expect to get 12,000 to 18,000 quarts per acre."

The yield and the price per quart are the ends that justify the means of producing the scrumptious shortcake-toppers. With prices ranging from 60 cents to 70 cents a quart for the pick-your-own berries, to $1.25 to $1.50 a quart for retail sales, producers reap the fruits of their labor in a rewarding way.

Analyzing the cold, cash facts on strawberry production, Ritter shared his views with growers from Franklin, York and Adams counties during the recent grower's meeting held here at Sandhoe's Fruit Farm.

While touring the Sandhoe strawberry patches, Ritter made several observations on planting and production of the berry crop. While growers questioned the economics of paid labor for runner placement and nipping the blossoms of young plants, Ritter stated, "The labor spent with young berries, pulling blossoms and setting runners, pays for itself in increased production."

Ritter pointed out that the first plant runner has 60% the production of the mother plant and the second runner has only 15% the production potential He recommended placing the runners six to eight inches from the mother plant in such a fashion as to form the spokes of a wheel. He also suggested fertilizing new patches 10-14 days after planting with 20 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

Ritter strongly stressed the need for growers to spend more time determining the types of grasses and weeds emerging in their patches and their soil pH before applying herbicides since proper identification and analysis are crucial to proper herbicide selection. He stated that the herbicide should be incorporated into the soil about one-half inch deep by either irrigation or mechanical means.

Acres of blossoming strawberries awaited inspection by growers from York, Franklin, and Adams counties at a recent growers meeting held at the Ralph Sandhoe Fruit Farm, Biglerville, Adams County. Some of the rows were damaged by what was determined to be a combination of herbicides and cold weather.

Ritter and Ralph Sandhoe, owner and operator of Sandhoe Fruit Farm, examined a two-year-old patch. Soil acidity, cold and herbicide damage were suggested as possible causes of plant loss in this patch.

When questioned on variety perference, Ritter stated, "At the present time, I would recommend the Red Chief. It has fewer white heads and larger secondary berries." Stressing that a good flowering stock will have 15 to 20 berry buds, he pointed out that Red Chief produces 14 to 16 flowering buds per flower stock.

Several growers questioned possible burn damage to their younger plants due to the application of the herbicide Sinbar. Ritter cautioned the growers to sample their soils for acidity, levels before selecting their herbicide to avoid possible burning. When applying Sinbar, Ritter stressed application of the single herbicide and not to mix it with Devrinol.

Ritter, in response to questions on patch renovations, likened the process to "ending up by starting all over again." When renovating the patch, he outlined first checking for weeds and then spraying the rows with 2, 4-D, Formula 40. Ten to fourteen days later the patch should be moved to a height of two inches above the tops of the crowns with a rotary or clipper mower.

Then, according to Ritter, follow with a soil test, apply nitrogen, and cultivate between the rows Then take a spring-tooth harrow right over the tops of the rows, taking out 85-90 percent of the plants. Then use Devrinol or Sinbar Finally, Ritter recommended applying mulch — one half in the last week in July and the other half after the first good frost.

To obtain maximum berry production, Ritter concluded, "In strawberry production some of the best things you can do are done two years ahead of your crop.

"Start with getting some good organic matter worked into your fields ... Thee is an increased labor cost in setting the runners, nipping the blossoms from new plants, and the proper use of herbicides, but consider the return on a couple of thousand extra quarts per acre. What you put into your berries is what you'll get out of them."

Marshall Ritter, Penn State pomologist, center, explained the planting and care of new strawberry patches to growers. Ritter recommended planting the variety, Red Chief, since it produces fewer white and more secondary berries.

NAILE announces Q.H. stakes deadlines

LOUISVILLE, Ky — Deadlines for major competition brackets at North American International Livestock Exposition Quarter Horse Stakes were announced by Harold Workman, NAILE General Manager. When making the announcement, Workman noted that Quarter Horse owners can save money by planning early, since the nomination fee for the classes is arranged on an escalating basis according to date

The Stakes Events are as follows Barrel Race Maturity (foals of 1979) - $500 added; Barrel Race Sweepstakes (any age) - $1,000 added; Reining Horse Futurity (foals of 1979) - $1,000 added; Amateur Reining Horse Futurity (foals of 1979) - $500 added; Amateur Western Pleasure Classic (any age) - $500 added; Western Pleasure Futurity (foals of 1980) - $1000 added, Western Pleasure Maturity (foals of 1979) - $500 added; Bridle Path Hack (Hunt Seat) Classic (foals of 1979 & 1980) - $500 added; Daily Team Roping Classic (any age) - $500 added; and Calf Roping Classic (any age) - $100 added.

Nominating fees and deadlines for all categories are as follows: $100 - if nominated before August 1; $150 - if nominated after August 1, until September 1; $200 - if nominated after September 1, until October 31, and $400 - if nominated after October 31, until November 12.

Officials of the NAILE Quarter Horse Show expect entries to be up in 1982. The show ranks 16th nationally and is rated as a National Class A event All Quarter Horse events will again be held at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center.

Nominating fees for the Stakes Events should be mailed to the North American International Livestock Exposition, P.O. Box 36367, Louisville, KY 40233. Workman said that detailed conditions pertaining to Stakes participants will be mailed when nominating fees are received. Special requests for information will also be honored.

The North American International Livestock Exposition, the world's largest all-breed livestock show, will be November 6-19 in Louisville, at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center. The NAILE is sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, Commonwealth of Kentucky, and total NAILE premiums will exceed $300,000.

Rain aids spring-planted crops in China

WASHINGTON, D.C — Needed rainfall in China dramatically improved conditions for spring-planted crops, but hot, dry weather before the rainfall further hurt potential winter grain yields according to a weekly report issued last week by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility of the U.S. Departments of Commerce and Agriculture.

Below-normal temperatures reduced grain prospects in Spain while heavy rain interfered with fieldwork and crop development in the U.S. Great Plains.

Highlights of the report follow.

— United States. Rainfall in the Great Plains delayed fieldwork and heaviest totals near the central Oklahoma-Texas border were detrimental to crop development while washing out fields in some areas. Surface soils became too dry for planting and germination over the eastern corn and soybean belts, but fields in the Southeast dried sufficiently to permit planting progress.

— USSR. Generally dry weather over much of the Ukraine, Black Soils, North Caucasus and Volga Valley aided spring fieldwork. Additional moisture is needed, however to continue favorable winter grains growth. Wet weather delayed spring fieldwork in northern regions Only light, spotty showers were reported over a majority of the spring grains areas in the New Lands.

— Europe. Light showers fell on crop areas of France and northern Italy. Subfreezing temperatures and frosts further reduced grain prospects in northern and central Spain

— Canada. A series of storms brought periods of showers and cool temperatures to the Prairie Provinces. In southeastern Saskatchewan and southern Manitoba, heavier rainfall further delayed fieldwork.

— Mexico. Heavy rains in upper northeast regions benefited corn and sorghum now in the late reproductive stage where considerable amounts of water are required Lighter rainfall further south helped citrus and sugarcane The southern Plateau corn belt continued dry

— South America. Wet weather extended north from Buenos Aires through Rio Grange do Sul into southern Parana Although harvest activity was delayed in some crop areas, the rain improved soil moisture supplies needed for wheat planting — Australia. Only light showers fell on southern crop areas. Most grain areas need additional moisture in coming weeks to aid uniform seed germination.

— Eastern Asia. Hot, dry weather in China's winter grain areas further hurt potential grain yields of unirrigated fields before needed rains fell at midweek The moisture dramatically improved conditions for spring-planted crops. Heavy rains in the south caused severe localized damage to rice.

— South Asia. Cool wet weather returned to important winter grain areas in northern Pakistan and India, damaging harvested winter grains Premonsoon showers continued over eastern and southern India.

— Southeast Asia. Rainfall increased on the Central Plains of Thailand as the tropical rain belt continued its northward movement. Rice planting should begin shortly

— Northwestern Africa. Late season showers continued over winter grain areas of Tunisia, central and eastern Algeria and inland parts of Morocco Temperatures throughout the region were below normal

Federal Order 2 continues promotion chip-in

NEW YORK, N Y — A plan whereby dairy farmers contribute money for milk promotion activities of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., was again approved by Thomas A. Wilson, Market Administrator, New York-New Jersy Milk Marketing Area. These milk promotion activities include advertising, nutrition education, publicity for dairy products, marketing and product research, and informational services

Noting that New York and New Jersey have mandatory milk promotion plans, and Pennsylvania has one under consideration, the Market Administrator stated that no dairy farmer will be subject to deduction under this program if he is making mandatory contributions under a state plan.

Wilson said this action allows handlers regulated by the marketing orders to send "positive letters" to their dairy farmer suppliers. A dairy farmer who receives a letter will be considered to approve for one year deductions of eight cents per hundredweight from his monthly milk checks, unless he notifies his handler in writing that no deduction should be made.

Monies deducted from payments for milk delivered on or after June 1, 1982, will be paid directly by the handler to the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc.

The Market Administrator explained that participation is voluntary for both handlers and producers, and a participating producer may have deductions stopped at any time by notifying the handler. A producer who does not want to participate and who receives no letter need not notify his handler since no deductions will be made.

In approving the plan for the coming year, Wilson pointed out there has been no substantial opposition to the use of the positive letter procedure by producers.

Use of the positive letter approach was requested by Dairylea Cooperative Inc., Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., and Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, Inc.

Farmers need public help for good soil stewardship

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — In today's economy, the bumper-sticker slogan that "Conservation Pays" is really a myth for many farmers, says Fred P. Miller, Extension soil and water resources specialist and professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Soil conservation practices will usually pay off in the long run, Miller explains, but farmers nowadays are often forced by financial realities to operate on a short-run basis.

In a recent interview for Soil Stewardship Week, Miller noted that part of the romance of U.S. rural life has been that farmers are the guardians of what is perhaps our nation's most valuable natural resource.

For nearly 50 years, the U S. Department of Agriculture, through its Soil Conservation Service and other government agencies, has spent approximately $15 billion on various soil conservation programs. There have been a few dramatic success stories.

For instance, the Great Plains "Dust Bowl" conditions of the 1930s are considerably improved. And unhealthy pollution in many of our streams and rivers has been reduced to the extent of making some of them once more fishable and swimmable.

But such improvements appear to have been successful in controlling only about one-fifth of our nation's agricultural erosion problem. More than half of U.S. cropland still remains vulnerable to water and wind erosion. And more than one-third of our cropland is now seriously eroding each year.

Miller cites statistics which show that 1.5 to 2 billion tons of soil from the U.S. mainland is washed into the nation's waterways each year from nonfederal land.

Approximately three to four times this amount is washed into the lower portions of fields, along fencerows, onto flood plains and on other land areas remote from stream channels. The amount of sediment discharged from U.S. rivers into the oceans of the world approaches a half-billion tons annually.

Despite these sobering statistics, Miller admits there are many persons in this country who are unimpressed. Why shouldn't the American public view its nation's agriculture as a bottomless horn of plenty?

The frontier mind-set of the 1800s with plenty of land has been reinforced in the Twentieth Century by crop surpluses, farm price support programs, acreage set-aside and farmer cries for price parity. These are not the sounds of a nation facing food shortages.

The time is ripe, says the Maryland agronomist, for an effective federal policy to supplement state and local policy initiatives to establish a more pronounced soil stewardship ethic in this country. Traditionally, there have been three basic methods for accomplishing this goal.

These included: a moral appeal through educational programs, advertising, preaching and public information campaigns; a form of bribery through incentives such as cost-sharing, technical assistance, rewards, awards and other means; penalties to induce behavior changes through the force of law

Miller notes that all three of these methods have been tried during the past four decades, but the emphasis has been on voluntary aspects Now, some leaders have given up on this approach

It may well be time to start placing more emphasis on incentives and mandatory approaches, Miller adds, provided that sufficient funding is made available. At least one major agricultural state, Iowa, has enacted legislation to follow the penalty route.

In this latter vein, Miller points out, the courts have held that just because good soil stewardship works a hardship on an individual does not necessarily mean that society can forgive a person's disregard for it.

Two additional approaches to promoting a soil stewardship ethic in this nation are also being considered these days, the Maryland agronomist commented.

One approach stipulates that agricultural research workers at land-grant universities and the U S. Department of Agriculture must consider the impact of their efforts on soil erosion Development of no-till and minimum tillage methods of crop production is a major bright spot in this direction Improved technology only for the sake of increased agricultural production should no longer be a major goal

Secondly, Miller declares, there must be a conscious decision by the federal government to improve the health of the farm economy With economic vitality, farmers can more easily plan for the future Such long-range planning would or should include major expenditures for soil conservation measures where-ever necessary

Haiti begins ASF eradication program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As part of an international cooperative program to eradicate African swine fever from their country, Haitians are now eliminating pigs, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official has announced.

Since there is no vaccine or cure for African swine fever, the only way to eliminate the disease is to eliminate the hogs and bring in disease-free stock later, said Harry C. Mussman, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Mussman said Haiti proclaimed a state of agricultural emergency April 29 to facilitate the eradication and the subsequent redevelopment of the swine industry there.

Mexico, Canada and the United States are providing funds, personnel, equipment and technical assistance for the eradication program, which is administered by the Inter-American Institute for Cooperation in Agriculture in association with the Haitian Ministry of Agriculture.

"Haiti has suffered heavy swine losses since African swine fever invaded the country late in 1978," Mussman said. "The presence of the disease is a threat to the swine industries of other western hemisphere countries. It is extremely infectious and no one has yet developed a cure or a vaccine for the disease."

The Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispanola with Haiti, recently completed a successful eradication program and is now rebuilding its swine industry.

"Riding Haiti of the disease will help assure that the Dominican Republic remains free of the disease," Mussman said.

Initially, Haitian swine will be eliminated in the northwestern part of the country on a trial basis before the government extends the program to the remainder of the country, Mussman said.

"Many swine owners in the region have already voluntarily killed or marketed their animals," Mussman said. "Those who still have pigs will be paid after their animals are slaughtered and the meat will be returned to them for their use. The African swine fever virus presents no hazard to people and they may safetly eat the meat of infected pigs."

Program officals estimate that slaughter throughout the country will be completed early in 1983. After a period of surveillance to assure that no virus remains, Haiti will begin to restock rural areas with productive breeds of healthy swine.

A side benefit of the eradication will be the elimination of other swine diseases that currently exist in Haiti, Mussman said. Educational programs will help rural Haitians develop alternate of protein during the period when they are without pigs.

Nat'l conference on peace, agriculture next Saturday

DES MOINES, Ia. — The U.S. Farmers Association will celebrate its 30th Anniversary by hosting a national conference on the role of agriculture in world peace next Saturday. The conference, "Peace and Agriculture," will be held here at the Hotel Fort Des Moines, 10th and Walnut.

According to Jim Jordan, conference coordinator, the conference will provide a unique opportunity for farmers, rural people and other concerned citizens to discuss issues and develop action strategies linking farm, food and land policies to world peace.

"In addition, the crucial issue of the decline of the family farm and its impact on our society will be a key topic," he said.

The conference will be addressed by Bishop Maurice Dingman of the Catholic Diocese of Des Moines, and by Fred Stover, president of the U.S. Farmers Association. Also speaking will be Wayne Osborn, professor of history, Iowa State University, and Bill Pratt, professor of history, University of Nebraska, Omaha. Rick Nolan, former U.S. Congressman from Minnesota, will be the featured speaker at the conference banquet. Nolan is a leading advocate for parity farm legislation.

A highlight of the conference will be a poetry reading by Meridel LeSueur, internationally-known Midwestern poet and novelist, and life-long advocate for world peace and international understanding.

The national conference will attract more than 300 members of the U.S. Farmers Association and other farm and peace groups and individuals from the Midwest.

The U.S. Farmers Association is a national association of farmers who are concerned about the continued vitality of the family farm and the relationship of agricultural policy to issues of world peace and political stability.

"The Association is a growing organization that attempts to serve as a vehicle to address the needs and concerns of the traditional backbone of American agriculture — family farmers. Today, because of growing concern about family farm agriculture, the Association is experiencing renewed growth," Jordan said.

Registration for the national conference begins at 9 a.m., June 5, at the Hotel Fort Des Moines. Advance registrations can be obtained for $7 by writing the U.S. Farmers Association at 550 11th Street, Suite 200, Des Moines, Iowa 50309. Registrations will be accepted at the door for $10. An evening banquet is planned at a cost of $10.

For more information, contact Jim Jordan, Conference Coordinator, U.S. Farmers Association at 515-244-5671.

Lancaster conservation tour coming June 16

LANCASTER — A bus tour highlighting conservation in the Elizabethtown area is planned for June 16. Sponsored by the Lancaster County Conservation District, the tour will start from the Farm and Home Center parking lot at 8:30 a.m.

First stop will be at the Penn State Southeast research farm at Landisville. John Yocum, senior research associate, will show test plots of corn, small grains, hay, and tobacco, and various tillage methods used in establishing the plots.

Next stop will be at the farm of the 1982 Outstanding Conservation Framer, Albert Breneman. Located between Manheim and Mount Joy, the Breneman's 140-acre dairy farm has a complete conservation plan including terraces, (gradient terraces and storage terraces with pipe outlets), sod waterways, strip cropping, and manure storage.

The next stop will be the Masonic Home at Elizabethtown. In addition to the retirement home, an extensive farming operation of over 1,500 acres of fruit, vegetables, field crops and livestock is also managed. A sod waterway with a stormwater detention basin and pipe was recently completed and will be shown.

Lunch will be at the Washington House at Bainbridge and will include an "all you can eat" buffet.

After lunch, historic natural resources, the "Witness Tree" and the Donegal Spring at the Donegal Presbyterian Church will be seen. The witness tree played a part in the American Revolution more than 200 years ago and today is a living reminder of our heritage. The tour will return to the Farm and Home Center by 3:30 p.m.

Cost of the tour and lunch is $7. Reservations may be made by calling the Lancaster County Conservation District Office at 717/299-5361. Deadline for reservations is June 11.

One of the stops on the June 16 Lancaster conservation tour will include the Donegal Presbyterian Church where the "Witness Tree" still stands as a living reminder of our country's heritage. The tree played a part in the American Revolution more than 200 years ago.

Wayne Wool Pool June 15

HONESDALE — The annual Wayne County Wool Pool, sponsored by the Wayne County Sheep and Wool Growers Association, will be held Tuesday, June 15 from 8 a.m. to 12 noon at Frank Machek's barn, located three miles east of Pleasant Mount at the intersection of Routes 371 and 247

The wool has been sold to the Provost Lefebre Co., Jamestown, South Carolina for the following prices. 3/8-1/4 staple - .4110 per pound; 3/8-1/4 clothing - .3500; medium rejects - .3200; low 1-4 - .3850, fine staple - 55, 1/2 staple - .50, fine and 1/2 clothing - 3525, fine and 1/2 rejects - .3000, tags - .0500

Anyone who has wool to sell is welcome to market it through the wool pool. A small deduction is made to cover the cost of operating the pool

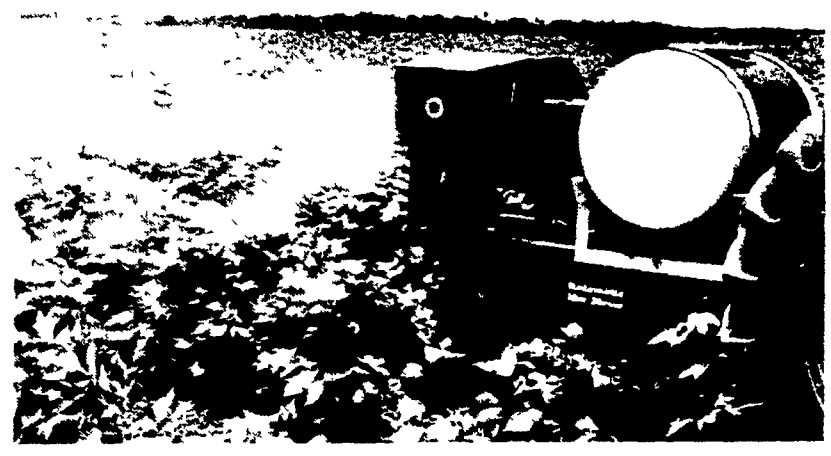
Automatic Micro-Mist Sprayer Controls Droplet Size



The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer can be powered by the tractor pto for use on rowcrops, vegetables and orchards.

The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer is a faster, more efficient, economical alternative to conventional boom and aerial spraying of rowcrops, vegetables and orchards

It takes mist blowing techniques a step further by giving the operator the ability to control the diameter of the spray droplets and choose the diameter best for each particular spraying application

Controlling droplet diameter results in increased effectiveness and reduced materials cost.

The smaller droplets of the Micro-Mister coat all sides of the target evenly, due to the powerful turbulence produced by the unit The Micro-Mister effectively coats the undersides of leaves, reaches inside trees, even coats the back sides of fruit.

The compact size and the utilization of chemical concentrates by the Micro-Mister offers many advantages. The unit comes in models that can be powered by PTO on small tractors, or a gasoline powered skid unit that slides into the bed of any pickup. Because the Micro-Mister eliminates the need for cumbersome water hauling equipment that requires additional manpower and time-consuming stops for refilling, the Automatic Micro-Mister saves both time and money.

The Automatic Micro-Mister can offer effective coverage up to 250 feet, depending on application, and can operate at speeds up to 12 m p.h , with no dangerous overspray or drift.

Video tape rolls into farm sector

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

ELIZABETHTOWN — A 15-month-old Holstein heifer was gently ushered into a bright orange hospital chute.

Click. The headgate snapped into place with very little resistance from its captive. A veterinarian approached the animal and began preparing her for an embryo transplant The heifer was about to become a recipient or surrogate mother, a major link in the progressive embryo transplant procedure. She also was going to be a star.

The heifer-veterinarian interaction was part of a major production between Action Video and Em Tran, Inc. Under the direction and camera work of Ian Harrower, president, owner and general manager of Action Video, the entire sequence of an embryo transplant was video taped. The final edited product will be used to train veterinarians and technicians while a special edited version will help Em Tran, Inc. explain the benefits of embryo transplants to prospective clients

One year ago this month, Harrower struck out on his own to develop Action Video, a firm designed to produce educational and promotional programs for private industry. His track record to date has included programs for Howmet Aluminum Corp. on how to mill aluminum and Suburban Propane on how to safely extinguish gas fires, to name a few.

A former station manager for WLYH, a Lancaster television station, Harrower, said he could see the untapped potential for video tape and thus Action Video was born.

"Most people do not understand video tape and how it can be utilized. Its applications are growing by leaps and bounds," Harrower noted.

Unlike its counterpart, 16 milimeter film, video tape is a lower cost medium since it needs no processing and results can be viewed immediately on a monitor, said Harrower.

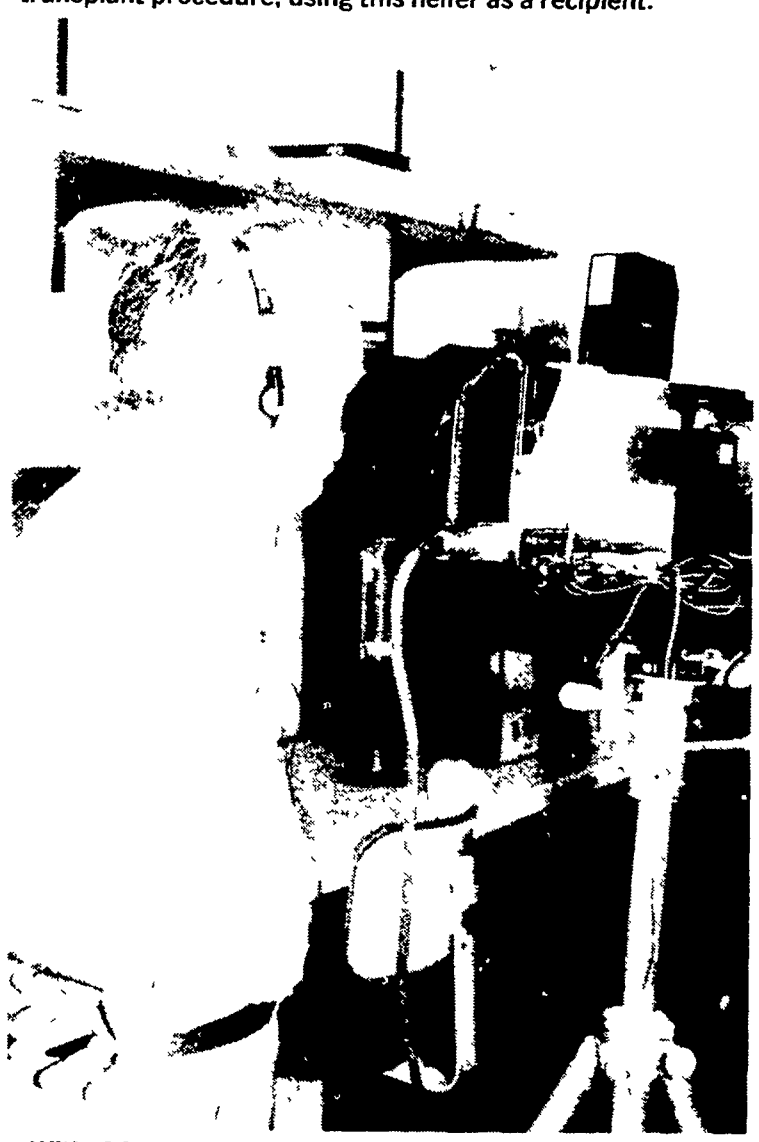
Another advantage, he noted, is that a monitor is nothing more than the average television set. The tape can be erased and reused, eliminating high film costs. Ad-

(Turn to Page A28)

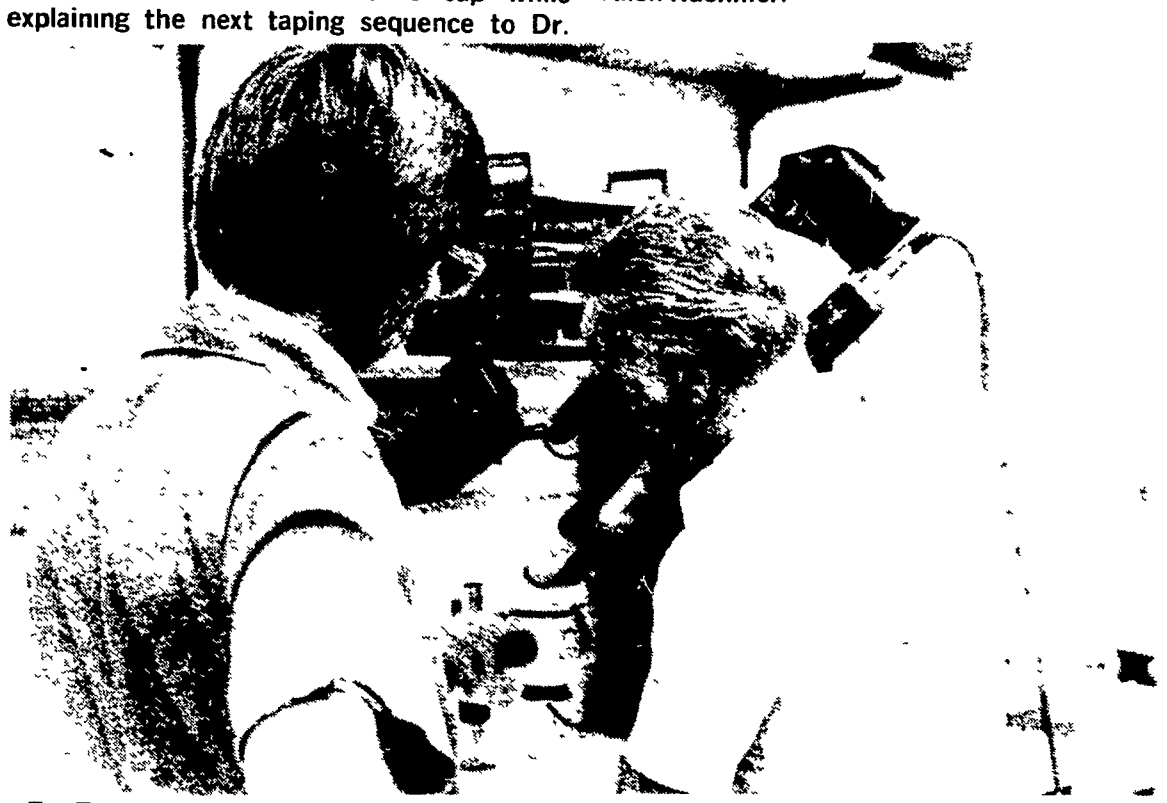
"You ought to be in pictures." And that's exactly what is in store for this curious heifer. Harrower taped the embryo transplant procedure, using this heifer as a recipient.

Harrower adjusts technician Susan Forrey's small microphone before a taping sequence in the Em Tran lab.

Harrower dons his director's cap while explaining the next taping sequence to Dr. Allen Rushmer.



With 34 years of broadcast experience behind him, Ian Harrower is the one-man taping, directing and business crew for Action Video.



Em Tran veterinarian, Allen Rushmer looks on while Harrower places the video camera over a microscope eyepiece. With this technique, Harrower is able to project the embryos onto a television screen.

"Impro...my cows' productivity and my profits depend on it."

"I've been working with the Impro Production Program for 15 years. I use a proportioner to meter Impro Whey into the barn's watering system so that each cow gets one 'cc' a day. That's only part of the program, but it makes a big difference in productivity and milk quality, and my herd's conception rate has been consistently high. The Impro Program is definitely important to my profits."

ditionally, the one-half inch video tape can be edited on the spot. And at no cost to a prospective client, Harrower offers a "free sample," of the technique to be viewed immediately.

Harrower, a self-defined "city fellow," recently began canvassing the agriculture sector for clients.

"I have read that the farming community is frequently the buyers of video tape machines," he said.

Prior to the Em Tran production, Harrower taped a local horse show. Trainers and riders watched their performance on regular speed, slow motion and stop action The tape told all, said Harrower. The equestrian audience was able to pick out faults as well as correct procedure by the riders and horses. As a result, the Lancaster businessman has plans to produce tapes for riding clinics.

Em Tran became Harrower's second agriculture production. The Action Video administrator said taping the embryo transfer sequence from start to finish has been the most unusual production, so far.

Dr. Alan McCauley, Em Tran owner explained that he was familiar with the benefits of video tapes and didn't need much convincing to produce the ET training tape.

"In order to have any expansion, we need a uniform training program. We would train people involved in export, if we could be a part of it" McCauley said. The tape also would act as a check and balance. For example, if a problem became apparent with ETs the tape could be viewed a number of times, said McCauley, to pinpoint a procedure error.

In addition, the flexibility of tape will allow McCauley to dub in any new technique that may be developed in the future. He noted that the USDA and Japan have expressed an interest in training veterinarians and technicians.

As a communications specialist, Harrower has located in a number of communities, including, Detroit, Philadelphia, Altoona and finally Lancaster. But it is here in the Red Rose city that Harrower finds the most potential for his business.

"I have faith in the economic stability of the area," he said. The county's market place includes outlets in agriculture, industry and tourism to name a few.

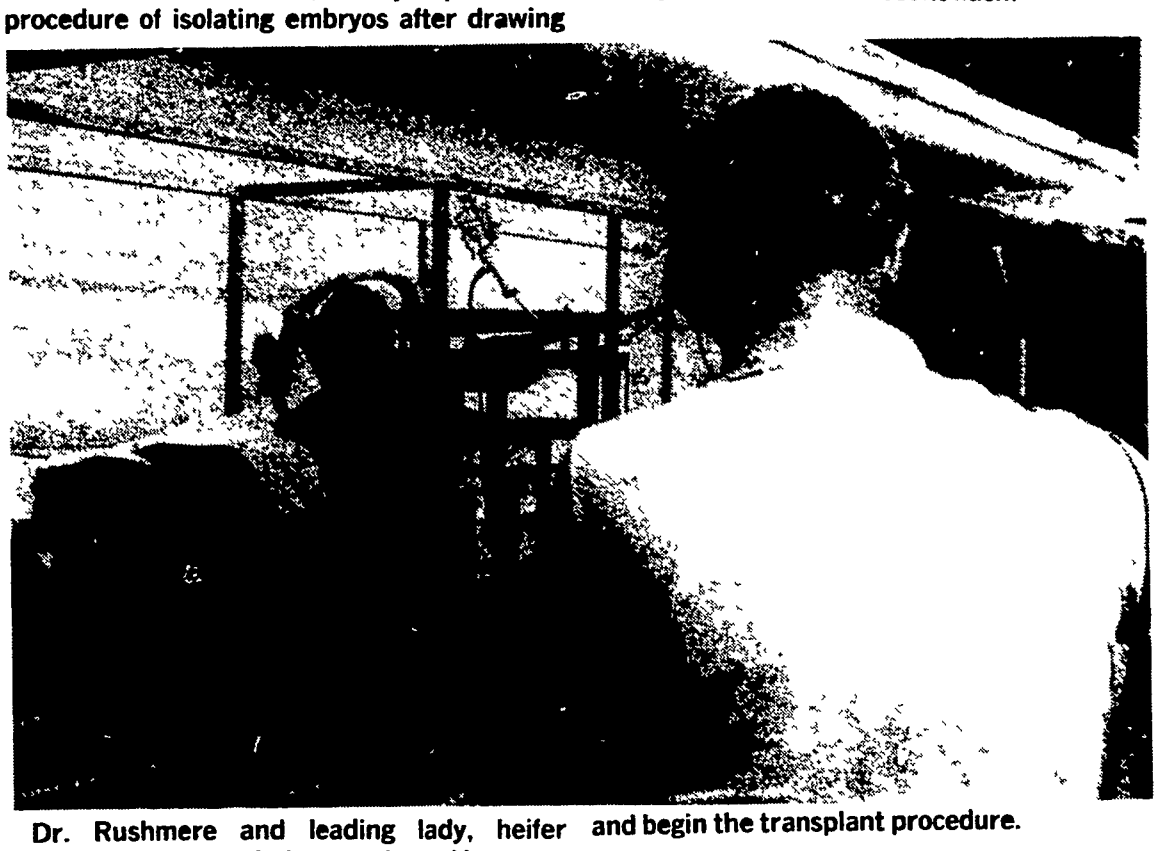
"In two or three years, video tape will be right up there with the computer in application," Harrower projected.

Throughout his 34-year broadcasting career, Harrower has filled the positions of announcer, writer, director, producer and program manager His broad background has equipped him to step in as a one-man taping and directing crew. When needed, however, Harrower explained he has five professionals who volunteer their services

In addition to business ventures, Action Video will provide coverage of weddings, seminars, conventions and the recording of documents and valuable possessions for insurance and legal indentification. The newly-formed company presently works out of Harrower's residence at 2954 Kings Lane in Lancaster.

"Even though the economy is bad," Harrower admitted, "I have all the faith in the world that this application is going to go."

While the camera rolls, Forrey explains the procedure of isolating embryos after drawing off liquid obtained in a recent flush.



Dr. Rushmere and leading lady, heifer number 874, take their cues from Harrower and begin the transplant procedure.

Clinton farmers say "no" to FmHA housing

BY SHEILA MILLER

MILL HALL — A controversy of farmland development continues to brew in the small town of Mill Hall, Clinton County. But what's flaming the fire between farmers and housing industry people is not the fact that the development will occur on farmland, but who is financing the development project.

This was not always the case though, reports Clinton County Farmers' Association president Ralph Dotterer. He explains that when the housing project for the elderly, handicapped, and moderate income families was proposed, it was originally planned for a tract of prime farmland in neighboring Bald Eagle Township.

Combining the fact that the proposed location was planned on some of the county's most productive soils along with the fact that the project would be financed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration, the recipe was complete for a strongly-voiced, local objection — not only from the county's Farmers' Association, but also from its Conservation District.

In a Feb. 23, 1982 letter to FmHA's state director, Elmer Hawbaker, in Harrisburg, District chairman James E. Baird questioned the federal agency's financing of the 5-acre, 40-unit housing project.

"Are land-conscious agencies working in opposite directions . . . It appears to us that while [illegible] stated-policy is to preserve prime farmland, this loan would serve to create an incentive for the development of prime farmland," he wrote.

The policy which Baird referred to was the Dec. 22, 1981 Farmland Protection Policy Act, PL-97-98. This law specifies that government agencies may not become involved in projects involving prime agricultural land. This law was reinforced by a directive sent down to all the USDA agencies by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block who banned developing prime farmland except when no alternative sites can be found.

Responding to the District's letter questioning the prime farmland site, FmHA did not approve the housing loan for the Bald Eagle Township location. However, the developer, Robert Stover of Federal Housing Consultants, was ready with another possiblility — this time within the Mill Hall borough limits.

Final approval for the FmHA loan for this new site is pending, although the financing application has been approved and funds were obligated.

Even though the Mill Hall site no longer involves prime farmland, Farmers' Association president Ralph Dotterer still continues to battle the development. In a May 7, 1982 letter to FmHA director Elmer Hawbaker, Dotterer itemized the three major objections "farmers have to the proposed housing project:"

- "A farmer must pay 14 percent interest to Farmers Home Administration after his financial situation is bad enough to qualify him for a FmHA loan. The housing developers can get a loan at 1 percent interest;
- "The people behind the housing development should pay income tax on the same basis as other citizens; and
- "This area (Clinton County) already has an excess of good housing."

Dotterer referred to a survey conducted by a Lock Haven College professor which showed apartment owners in the college town are experiencing a vacancy rate of 6-20 percent.

"We find that many people are migrating to the West and South, making it increasingly difficult to fill the existing housing. Apartments are empty; hundreds of houses are up for sale with no buyers. We do not need any more housing," wrote Dotterer, with great conviction.

According to FmHA director Elmer Hawbaker, there are a number of conditions that have to resolved before final approval is given on the low-income, elderly rental units. He stated the recent questioning by the community on the validity and accuracy of the housing market survey done by the developer for the proposed area would have to be investigated by FmHA

"If we find there is no adequate market for this type of housing, the loan will not go through," said Hawbaker. "Present homeowners fear the housing project will be abandoned and will serve as a blight on their properties — deteriorating their land values. The last thing that we want to accomplish is a negative impact on the community."

The USDA lender explained why what would seem to be a farm-oriented federal loan source would provide lower rates to nonfarm borrowers.

"This one percent housing loan program is designed to provide facilities for the very poor and elderly," Hawbaker explained. "The developer puts together a limited partnership to fund ten percent of the total project cost (in this case, a group of three medical doctors)."

The catch of this 'dream'-loan deal, however, is the federal government retains the right to limit and regulate rental fees charged to tenants of the housing units.

"Rents may not be any higher than necessary to provide an 8 percent return on the partners' investments," Hawbaker noted, as he proceeded to relate an example.

"Take for instance the partnership that puts up $100,000 on a million dollar loan. They are only allowed to realize 8 percent on their $100,000 — not the million."

So, what makes this kind of investment inviting to doctors who could invest their money in higher-interest-earning accounts? According to Hawbaker it's the fact that they can take depreciation on the entire million dollar project.

When asked if these low-interest housing loans detract from the available farm loan funds, Hawbaker emphasized they do not. He likened the FmHA housing and farm loan allocations to the

Copper improves swine growth rate

NEWARK, Del — Copper is used in swine diets as a nutrient and as a way to improve growth rates. At 10 parts per million, it's an essential nutrient, promoting normal growth, maintenance and reproductive functions

When fed at levels ranging from 125 and 250 ppm, it may lead to improved gains and feed conversions, says University of Delaware Extension livestock specialist Richard Fowler.

"Copper acts like an antibiotic when used at these higher levels," he says. It benefits as a grwoth promoter have been known for several years, but use has suddenly become widespread in the U.S.

'Cost is a major reason for the shift back to copper," he adds "It's $4 to $10 cheaper to supplement a ton of feed with copper than with an antibiotic. And the results are similar."

At all ages, growing swine respond to these higher rates. One midwestern study showed pigs fed copper at 125-250 ppm levels from weaning to market had nearly 3 percent better gains and a 1 percent improvement in feed conversion Antibiotic and copper also worked well in combination Chlortetracycline and copper together resulted in better gains in young pigs than copper alone, and improved feed efficiency by 3 8 percent

Responses to copper alone may vary, however Research conducted in Great Britain, Florida, Kentucky and Ohio showed that improved gains and feed conversions sometimes occur, but not always

Copper sulfate (the form used as a feed additive) may also cause some problems which deserve consideration, the specialist says

An overdoes of 300 to 500 ppm is toxic. This is a special danger when diets are low in iron and zinc

Copper passes through the pig, so the manure is very corrosive to metal feeders, gates and slats. Copper causes the manure to be very dark in color It increases the amount of sludge buildup in anaerobic waste storage facilities Since it is a bacteria inhibitor, it may also inactivate lagoons

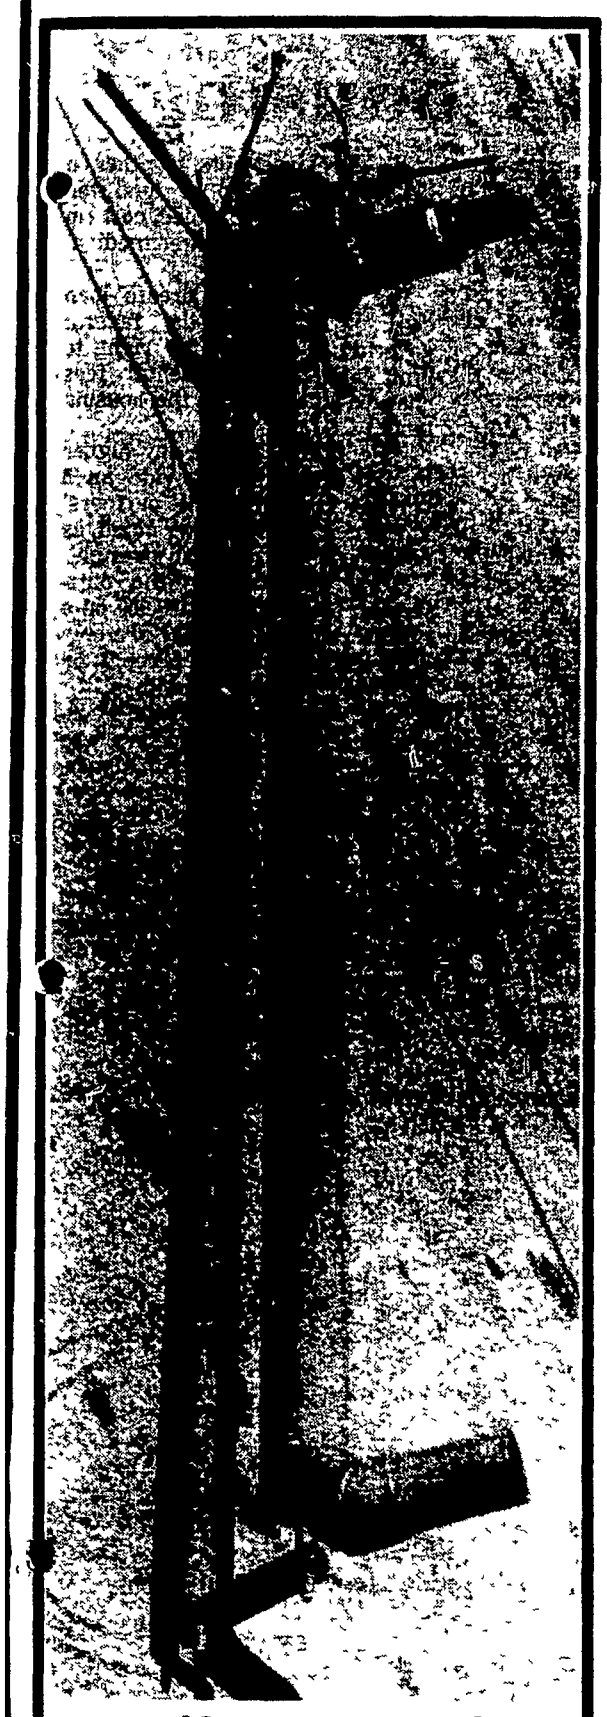
At current recommended manure application rates, copper does not accumulate in the soil profile to a significant amount.

Regardless of the antibiotic or additive program used in your swine diets, Fowler says to be sure to follow recommended levels and observe withdrawal periods Many product labels list a wide range of levels Copper works best in combination with an antibiotic

Medication responses appear to be greatest for young pigs from creep feeding through 60 to 75 pounds Therapeutic doses often help these animals through the stresses of changing temperatures, weaning, and moves from one environment to another, or from farm to farm through a feeder pig sale. After 75 pounds, subtherapeutic levels help maintain optimum growth and feed efficiency Many producers use only a growth promoting additive, rather than a broad-spectrum product from 100 pounds to market weight

Specific problems like persistent diarrhea, respiratory troubles or lameness require diagnosis before treatment, says Fowler There are there types of pneumonia, each responding to different medication ' Consult a veterinarian before beginning treatment," he advises ' A correct diagnosis can take less time than it takes you to use the line of products on your shelf And it can cost a lot less money "

Above all, practice good herd management, says Fowler Additives won't ever replace good husbandry as a means of getting better gains and feed efficiency



HERE'S THE FILL & STIR PIPE FOR YOUR LIQUID MANURE TANK

Whenever you fill an above-ground liquid manure storage tank you worry if you will ever be able to get it empty again. Will the solids settle in the bottom to cause an impossible mixing problem? Will your equipment clog? Will you need to add so much water you'll be hauling manure for days?

Now you can relax. Because US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania has just designed a unique fill and stir pipe unit. This fill and stir unit sits vertically in over the top of the tank and you use your present transfer pump. You can transfer/fill the manure under the top crust. And since the top crust is not broken you keep all the plant nutrients in the tank.

When you get ready to haul manure, the mixing capability of this unit really goes to work for you The top opening with a flexable snout moves up and down and sideways to allow you to discharge a stream of liquid in any direction to break up the top crust. At the same time, you can start a stirring action at the bottom of the tank by forcing liquid out the lower opening of this unit

So don't worry if you will get the manure out of your above-ground liquid manure tank any more. Write to US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, 3053 Barren Road, Oxford, PA 19363. Or call today for an action-packed demonstration Phone. (301) 398-2948.

Block to participate in soybean study

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Secretary of Agriculture John Block heads a distinguished group of agricultural leaders who will serve on a Blue Ribbon Panel to help direct a study of the future of the U.S. soybean industry over the next 20 years.

A joint project of Elanco Products Company and the American Soybean Association, the study, "2002: A Blueprint for Soybeans" will outline alternative futures for the U.S. soybean industry.

ASA Chief Executive Officer Kenneth L. Bader who will chair the Blue Ribbon Panel says, "The project is designed to bring together the best thinking in the soybean industry and other related agricultural interests. Panel members include decision makers and thought leaders for all segments of the industry from farmers to equipment manufacturers and processors.

"The results of the 2002 study will assist soybean farmers in planning their investments in land and equipment, help direct future farm policy and aid in constructing research and exort promotion programs to build soybean profits."

According to Bader, the first task of the Blue Ribbon Panel will be to identify the crucial issues that will affect the soybean industry over the next 20 years. As the project nears completion in June of 1983, the panel will assist in formulating the final report, including strategic recommendations based on information gathered during the next 12 months.

"The entire "Project 2002" study is divided into two segments," explains Project Manager Dennis Sharpe. "The first segment will be completed this summer and will be a progress report outlining and the key issues facing the soybean industry as identified by the Blue Ribbon Panel. The report will be presented at ASA's SOYBEAN EXPO in Minneapolis, August 6-9."

"The second part of the project involves in-depth research on the key issues and development of strategic recommendations to guide industry planning for the next 20 years," Sharpe explains. "This final report will be presented at ASA's SOYBEAN EXPO in Nashville in 1983."

"The soybean blueprint project represents an overall, unified approach to the challenges and opportunities ahead for soybeans," says Elanco Group Vice President for Agricultural Marketing, Bob Book. "This approach is superior to piecemeal studies and complex industry challenges. Elanco has supported yield contests and international market-building missions over the years. The 2002 project is our way of assuring that farmers and others in the soybean industry can capitalize on future opportunities."

Elanco, manufacturer of Treflan and Surflan herbicides, in jointly sponsoring Project 2002.

Screwworms threaten Texas livestock

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The first case of screwworms in the United States since May 1981 has been found in the Rio Grande valley of south Texas.

John K. Atwell, deputy administrator of U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said that larvae were collected about 15 miles northwest of McCook in Starr county on May 17 by an inspector of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

"Activities to stop this Texas infestation have already begun," Atwell said. "This includes releasing sterile screwworm flies, inspecting animals, trapping flies and distributing a combination bait-attractant-insecticide known as SWASS—Screwworm Adult Suppression System.

"The animals in the affected herd have been sprayed," Atwell continued. "In addition, we have sprayed a shipment of animals from the ranch that went through a sale barn at Alice during the past week. Another shipment of animals to Olton is being traced so it can be sprayed."

The nearest known infestation is some 200 miles south near Soto la Marina in the Mexican state of Tamaulipas. Inspectors in the United States as well as in Mexico are searching for additional screwworm infestations.

Screwworms are the larval stage of the screwworm fly, which deposits its eggs on the edges of wounds in warm-blooded animals. As the eggs hatch, the tiny larvae enter the wound to feed on living flesh. Odors from the infested wounds attract other female flies, which lay more eggs. Repeated infestations can kill the host animal.

Screwworms were eradicated from the United States and much of northern Mexico by releasing millions of artifically reared sexually sterile screwworm flies that mate with native screwworm flies, causing them to produce only infertile eggs

A cooperative U.S.-Mexican eradication program is currently underway to eliminate the pest from most of Mexico and establish a permanent barrier zone of sterile flies at the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in southern Mexico.

"It's extremely important for all livestock and pet owners to watch their animals carefully for signs of screwworm infestation," Atwell said. "They should submit samples of any worms found in a warm-blooded animal for laboratory identification. Postage-paid sample collection kits are available from county agents, animal health officials, veterinarians and feed stores.

"Only in this way can we locate any additional infestations that may exist," Atwell said.

budgets for the Army and Navy — interchangeable under no circumstances.

The FmHA director had no firm answer for why the federal government does not provide a one percent loan to farmers. "That's a question you'd have to ask Congress," he said. Currently, the lowest interest rate available to farmers is seven percent — limited resource loans for farmers who show they can't pay the going rate of 14 percent.

Hawbaker admitted that "more than twice" the amount of monies were available for FmHA housing loans than farm loans. In this year's farm allocations, Pennsylvania's FmHA office received $46.2 million for farm operating and ownership loans where housing and community water and waste allocations totaled $182.8 million.

Over the years, Congress has gotten the idea there is an acute housing shortage in rural areas, and sends ameliorating funds through the federal FmHA channels. But, if Dotterer's local survey is an indicator rural housing needs, such is not the case in Clinton County.

Pa. growers approve potato research amendment

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell recently announced that state potato growers have approved an amendment to the Pennsylvania Potato Research Program which will increase the rate of assessment to participating growers.

Hallowell said that during the referendum period, April 29 to May 13, 78 percent of the growers voted in favor of the amendment which will provide $30,000 in additional funding to keep research and development efforts in the state in progress.

The Potato Research Program supported by producers growing 25 or more acres of potatoes for sale, was established by state growers in 1976 as a self-help effort to develop improved potato varieties. It is administered by a board composed of affected potato growers.

Pennsylvania potato growers now assess themselves one cent per hundredweight on all potatoes sold. The amendment will increase the assessment to two cents per hundredweight.

Hallowell said, "The Pennsylvania Potato Research Program has made tremendous progress in the past six years Approval of the amendment will enable continued support of research and development of potato varieties adapted to state growing conditions, allowing Pennsylvania Agriculture to keep Growing Better "

NFO seeks new image through collective bargaining

BY SHEILA MILLER

LANCASTER — It's been a number of years since metropolitan newspapers across the nation carried inflamatory stories of farmers dumping bulk-tank loads of milk out on the ground to demonstrate their dissatisfaction with prices. But that event, triggered by desperate farmers who felt they deserved a better share for their milk, has left a lasting mark on one of the nation's farm organizations — the National Farmers Organization.

NFO, which had its controversial beginnings in 1955, was linked to that incident in the 1970s and has since been labeled a radical, leftist farm group. Now, NFO is trying to change its image into a more positive one, and is concentrating on its goal of achieving a profit for all farmers.

How do they plan to realize this ideal in a time when most farmers are just trying to break even? According to NFO's regional director, Lindsey Leiser, the answer is collective bargaining — a concept the organization has been pushing since 1958.

Leiser, 24, is headquartered in Pennsylvania at NFO's dairy department office in Easton. As regional director, Leiser is working toward the ultimate goal of contracting enough volume of fluid milk through organization and discipline so as to set a market price for farmers.

The son of a New York dairy farmer, Leiser realizes NFO is promoting a "progressive" idea — that of the farmer receiving the cost of producing food plus a profit. He also realizes that many farmers historically have hesitated to contract their goods and instead have been at the mercy of local market prices.

To sell his collective bargaining idea, Leiser says he "sells its benefits to the farmer — guaranteed milk checks, guaranteed markets, and a separate trust account for all commodities." He also points out that NFO is owned and controlled by farmers and that meetings are held at the county, state, and national levels to "keep farmers on top of what's happening."

Whether Leiser gets farmers to "buy" the benefits NFO is selling will determine if collective bargaining will help the American farmer survive. The key, of course, is volume and not necessarily the number of farmers who join, he stresses.

"Numbers won't achieve the goal; we need volume. If we had 10 percent of the production, we could set a fair price for all farmers," he says, keeping a tight lip on just how many members NFO boasts.

His reluctance to reveal the exact number of members, he says, is based on national policy, and keeps potential competition off guard — not knowing how much of the market is controlled by NFO. Leiser did say, however, that the organization has grown by 20 percent nationwide.

One York County farmer who is a member and representative of NFO since 1966 is Leland Stanford, R1 Dillsburg. Stanford is a dairyman milking 43 registered and grade Holsteins and cropping 90 acres of corn and alfalfa. He, too, sees NFO as an emerging farm organization.

"If we have enough of the production, there's nothing we can't do," Stanford says with enthusiasm. The York dairyman ultimately sees farmers controlling the marketplace through collective bargaining.

"Bargaining is raising the general price level received for farm products for all farmers," explains Leiser. "Bargaining is the best price for the day, and only certain individuals benefit. Who cares if you get 10 cents more than you neighbor for hogs if you're both still going to go bankrupt?"

To try to achieve a profitable price for all farmers, NFO is attempting to organize nationally and provide contracting programs for all commodities thereby keeping farm prices in balance. So, when the price of hogs goes up, processors and consumers would not be able to switch to a cheaper meat source.

NFO contracts directly with packers for their members for the best efficiency, says Leiser. There's no middleman or broker.

Currently, NFO has contracts in more than 300 milk plants across the U.S., and has been marketing milk in Pennsylvania since the early 1970s. Two of the plants buying NFO milk in the area are Abbotts of Philadelphia and Cumberland Farms of Florence, N.J.

"As long as these companies buy the milk NFO has to sell them, we don't care where they get the rest of the milk they need for their plant's total production," says Leiser.

"The important part," he adds, "is that they begin to depend on us for their supply. When NFO finally gets the power we're striving for through control of volume production, the companies won't be able to buy milk anywhere else for less money."

Whether these plants pay for the milk on the basis of protein or fat makes no difference to NFO, says Leiser. What matters is that the basis provides the highest price for NFO members. He points out that NFO began the push for protein pricing in the Midwest several years ago.

Of course, you rarely get something for nothing. Consequently, the services provided to farmers by NFO are in return for a $75 annual dues per family and a one percent bargaining fee.

According to Stanford, it's money well spent.

"Once agriculture gets turned around, we're going to have the power to set the prices we need — fair prices, not above what the law will allow," states Stanford.

"I would give up farming if I didn't believe in the future," he adds with conviction. "For the good of the country, I hope it's not too far down the road."

Lancaster, Chester grape growers get designation

HARRISBURG — State Agricultural Secretary Penrose Hallowell praised a ruling by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of the U.S. Treasury Department which establishes a viticultural area (a grape growing area historically and geographically distinct from others) in Lancaster and Chester Counties.

The "Lancaster Valley" designation can now be used in the labeling and advertising of wines produced from this grape growing area, effective June 11. Hallowell said, "The designation of 'Lancaster Valley' as a name of origin should allow our wineries in the area to identify their wines, and will enable consumers to better recognize these as fine Pennsylvania wines."

The Lancaster Valley viticultural area includes current grape producing areas of Lancaster County and the "Honey Brook Quadrangle" in Chester County.

Hallowell noted that Lancaster County was known for grape cultivation in the early 19th Century, but that until recent years, and the passage of the Limited Winery Act in 1968, the wineries in the area had been quiet. Three wineries now exist in the Lancaster Valley viticultural area — Conestoga Vineyards, Inc., Lancaster County Winery and Nissley Vineyards.

The stabilization proposal requires maintaining the current support price of $13.10 throughout 1982. Beyond that, the support level of parity will be provided for in legislation.

The second NMPF provision calls for a national referendum to approve a five cent per hundredweight check-off to promote the sale of dairy products with an emphasis on manufactured products.

The NMPF's proposal isn't the only bill circulating in Congress these days. During Thursday's hearings, Wisconsin Congressman Steve Gunderson was on hand to plug his bill Res. 6076 which calls for a base or an assigned quota for the nation's dairy farmers.

Gunderson's plan would be administered by a national dairy board, responsible for setting base and assessing those in excess. The board would have the ultimate authority to set cutbacks that would bring production closer to consumption levels. Assessments would be determined four times a year.

Depending on estimated surplus, the board could call for a percentage reduction and assess those producers maintaining above cutback levels.

For example, if the surplus was estimated at 5 percent, the net hundredweight price on that 5 percent would be about $7 or near world market price. That would appy to producers marketing at 100 percent of base during reduction periods.

A double assessment exists for producers marketing at more than 100 p. ent of their base levels.

The subcommittee is expected to reconvene in June for a final hearing on dairy price supports. Cozart said the subcommittee expects to hear input from not only dairy groups but consumers as well.

Following the final hearing, the subcommittee, chaired by Senator Thad Cochran (R — Miss) will review all testimony in a mark-up session and begin drafting dairy price support legislation, Cozart said.

Bucks-Montgomery Lamb Carcass Show

LANSDALE — The Bucks County Cooperative Extension Service, in cooperation with the Montgomery Cooperative Wool Pool, is holding the 1982 Lamb Carcass Show on June 8 and 10.

The live "on-foot" classes will be held Tuesday, June 8 at 6:30 p.m. at the Montgomery County 4-H Center, located on Snyder Road approximatedly ½ mile south of Lansdale. The "on-rail" carcass results will be presented on Thursday, June 10 at 7 p.m. at Gehman Meat Plant, located in Morwood, Montgomery County.

All participants will be given the opportunity to judge all classes with the official and estimate loin eye area, back-fat thickness, and quality grade.

Rules of the contest include

- There is a limit of three entries per farm;.
- A maximum of 30 lambs will be accepted;
- An entry form must be completed and returned to the Bucks Extension office by June 1;
- Ewe, ram, and wether lambs will be accepted;
- Minimum weight of live lambs will be 80 pounds;

The contest will feature three classes: light, medium, and heavyweight Classes will be established by weight with an equal number of lambs per class as the weights permit.

A slaughter charge of $11 per lamb will be collected from each participant, with a $3 credit being given for the hide if the lamb is unshorn After the contest is completed, the participant can choose to take the whole carcass home or have it processed for the freezer by the meat plant at 25 cents a pound. In the event the participant does not wish to keep the carcass, he or she must arrange for the sale.

For more information, contact Mike Fournier, County Agent, Neshaminy Manor Center, Doylestown, PA 18901.

cumstances under which agricultural operations may be the subject matter of nuisance suits and ordinances."

Action by the House members on SB 1349, a two-page bill which amends the Aug. 8, 1961 Milk Identification Act (P.L. 975, No. 436) introduced by Senators Frank O'Connell (R-20th), Edward Helfrick (R-27th) and Patrick Stapleton (D-41st), was unanimously favorable. With a vote of 186-0, the House passed the bill which further defines how milk and manufactured dairy products must be identified and spells out penalties for anyone violating the law.

The bill defines manufactured dairy products as "butter, cheese (natural or processed), dry whole milk, nonfat dry milk, dry buttermilk, dry whey, evaporated milk (whole or skim), condensed whole and condensed skim milk (plain or sweetened), and such other products for human consumption as may be designated by the secretary."

The fines established for mislabeling of dairy look-alikes range between $25 and $100 for the first and second offenses, and from $500 to $1,000 for three or more offenses. Jail sentences also are a possibility for offenders and would be no more than 30 days for first and second-timers, and no more than a year for flagrant violaters with three or more offenses.

As the summer recess for the legislators fast approaches, two other bills of importance to agriculture are waiting to follow in the "footsteps" of the Right to Farm and Milk Identification bills.

One of these is the companion bill to SB 1349 and is called the Milk Sanitation bill, SB 1350. The other is the Farmland Preservation bill, SB 1283 (not to be confused with HB 1823, Right to Farm). Both bills are on third consideration in the House and both will have to be returned to the Senate for concurrence on House amendments.

Introduced by the same three senators as its companion bill, the Milk Sanitation bill also amends a law to add language to cover manufactured dairy products. The law it amends is the July 2, 1935 Milk Sanitation Act (P.L. 589, No. 210). It is expected to be voted on by the House next week, returned to the Senate, and sent to the Governor for signing before the summer recess begins.

Facing the same hurried-up schedule is Sen. Edward Helfrick's Farmland Preservation bill which provides for state-owned farmland to be preserved for agricultural purposes through deed restrictions, and for young farm couples to be given preference when these farms are leased to the public.

Several bills which probably will be left hanging when the legislators leave Harrisburg for the summer are: Senate Bill 1208, the Cruelty to Animals bill introduced by Sen. George Gekas (R-15th), House Bill 1483, the Water bill which remains in committee; and Senate Bills 1085-86, the Tax bills that would permit school districts to levy taxes based on business use and occupancy and income, rather than real estate.

Despite the fact that the legislative session is rapidly nearing its finale, Rep. Clarence Dietz (R-78th) introduced House Bill 2499 this week — a total rewrite of the 1937 Pennsylvania Game Code. The bill, which has not come out in print yet, has been referred to the House Game and Fisheries Committee.

According to Pennsylvania Farmers' Association's Al Myers, there are no major problems with the bill. However, he added, PFA will strive for several amendments.

He said PFA will ask for a change in the present Game Code which only permits the farm owner who is cultivating the land to hunt on the property without a license. Myers said PFA will ask for that to be expanded to include retired farmers residing on their own farms, and also farm family working but not residing on the farm.

He added that PFA also will ask for additional fencing funds to be allocated for deer and elk damage control. The recently passed fencing law only provides for $25,000 for supply purchases. PFA will ask for $250,000, said Myers. Dietz' draft of the new Game Code only calls for a fencing fund with $100,000.

Final acreage reduction report shows 186.3 million acres enrolled

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers have signed up in the 1982 acreage reduction programs 186.3 million acres of feed grain, rice, upland cotton and wheat base acreage, according to figures released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The enrolled acreage represents 81 percent of the 229.9 million acres of total base acreage.

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block said, "These signup figures tell me the nation's farmers are quite willing to take charge of their own affairs. They have put their pencils to work and have decided this program is an option they need. I am very confident the final certification figures will be just as pleasing."

The signup was required before farmers are eligible for program benefits such as Commodity Credit Corporation loans, target price protection and — for wheat and feed grain participants — eligibility for the grain reserve.

Block said only those farmers who sign up and later certify their planted acreages will be eligible for program benefits. "There will be no exceptions," he said.

Base acreage enrolled includes 91.8 million under the feed grain program, 3.5 million under the rice program, 14.1 million under the upland cotton program and 76.9 million under the wheat program.

Farmers who sign up to participate in the acreage reduction programs for upland cotton, rice and wheat agree to reduce the plantings of their base acreage of these commodities by at least 15 percent, while feed grain producers will voluntarily reduce plantings of their base acreage by at least 10 percent. The acreage taken out of production will be devoted to a conservation use.

The 1982-crop national average loan rates are: barley, $2.08 per bushel; corn, $2.55 per bushel; oats, $1.31 per bushel, sorghum, $2.42 per bushel, wheat, $3.55 per bushel, rice, $8.14 per hundredweight; upland cotton, $0.5708 per pound.

Reserve loan rates are barley, $2.37 per bushel corn, $2.90, oats, $1.49, sorgnum, $2.75; and wheat, $4

Target prices for the 1982 crops are. barley, $2.60, corn, $2.70, oats, $1.50; sorghum, $2.69, wheat, 14.05, rice, $10.85, upland cotton, $0.71

Block names ag officer to Soviet Union

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has appointed Dale M. Posthumus as agricultural officer on the staff of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. Posthumus replaces Finn Rudd, who has been reassigned to the American Embassy in Rome.

In his new assignment, Posthumus will work in the areas of agricultural reporting and market development in the USSR. In fiscal 1981, the United States exported some $1.7 billion worth of agricultural products to the Soviet Union primarily corn and wheat

Posthumus joined USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service in February 1980 as an international economist in international trade policy. Two years later he was assigned to foreign agricultural affairs where he worked until his appointment to the Moscow post

Before joining the Foreign Agricultural Service, Posthumus held a variety of agriculture-related positions with Michigan State University

Posthumus, a native of Hastings, Mich., earned a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics from Michigan State University in 1975 and a master's degree from the same institution in 1979

He is scheduled to arrive in Moscow in early July

Pa. & Del. get approval for Bayleton use on wheat

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania and Delaware have been granted emergency exemptions from the Environmental Protection Agency permitting use of the fungicide Bayleton (triadimefon) to control powdery mildew on winter wheat.

Use of Bayleton has been granted under Section 18 of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, which allows emergency use of certain pesticides to control severe plant disease problems.

Powdery mildew on winter wheat has developed into a serious problem in a number of areas of the state, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture noted.

Current farm practices designed to increase wheat yield, such as application of higher levels of Nitrogen fertilizer, favor development of mildew. A dense stand canopy tends to prolong periods of high humidity. Many of the winter wheat varieties grown in Pennsylvania are very susceptible to mildew attack.

Wheat growers should observe their crops closely for powdery mildew. It appears as small cottony patches on leaves and stems. The patches are initially white but will turn gray-brown in color.

Bayleton has been found to be very effective in controlling powdery mildew on winter wheat without causing environmental problems.

Details causing limitations and use of Bayleton can be obtained from Dr. Gerard Florentine, Pesticide Coordinator, Bureau of Plant Industry, Pa. Department of Agricuture, 2301 North Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110; telephone (717) 787-4843.

At the University of Delaware, plant pathologist Bob Mulrooney and extension crops specialist Frank Webb are studying the use of Bayleton in several demonstration plots at the university's experimental farm near Georgetown.

So far, results look good on a number of susceptible varieties, they explain.

Several commercial trials are being conducted on cooperating farms around the state.

"Many of our wheat varieties with high yield potential—Blueboy (no longer commercially available), Pioneer 576 and 578, and Hart—are very susceptible to powdery mildew," Mulrooney says.

In extreme cases, the disease can reduce yield by up to 60 percent on such varieties.

Bayleton was developed for use in Europe where small grains are grown under intensive cultivation in combination with high nitrogen fertility and growth regulators to keep straw short and thus reduce lodging.

Webb and Mulrooney are currently studying the effectiveness of a similar system involving the use of 120 pounds of nitrogen plus Bayleton plus a growth regulator. They're using three wheat varieties—two of them highly susceptible to powdery mildew. They will be comparing yields from these plots with yields from wheat receiving conventional treatment—that is, 60 to 70 pounds of nitrogen put down in a single spring application.

In similar trials at the University of Maryland last year, researchers got over 100 bushels an acre in ahigh management program using the variety Blueboy.

Mulrooney and Webb are also looking at the effects on production of two different nitrogen sources—30 percent nitrogen solution versus ammonium nitrate.

Results won't be known until early July, when grain is harvested, but so far the program shows great promise.

"Hopefully, these trials will give us better data for recommendations," Mulrooney says. "One question we have not explored yet is cost-effectiveness. We need yields to do that. But it's certainly something we'll be looking at."

Broiler placements down

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the Commonwealth during the week ending May 15 were 2,331,000 according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The placements were two percent below both the corresponding week a year earlier and the previous week. Average placements during the past nine weeks were one percent below a year ago.

Placements in the 19 key poultry producing states were 84,627,000, one percent below the previous week and fractionally above the same week a year earlier. Average placements in the key states during the past nine weeks were one percent below a year ago.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection during the week ending May 5 totaled 1,980,000, with an average liveweight of 4.16 pounds.

First set of "cloned" twin calves born

FORT COLLINS, Col. — Two identical twin heifers, produced by non-surgically recovering embryos from a donor cow, splitting them and transferring them to a recipient mother, were born last Monday night at Colorado State University.

CSU researchers now are awaiting the birth of 10 more sets of twins, also produced by embryo splitting and transfer. Calves will be born at infrequent intervals between now and August, said R. Peter Elsden, one of a team of animal reproduction researchers at CSU's Animal Reproduction Laboratory embryo transfer unit.

"It's a little difficult to tell exactly when, especially with twins," he explained. "They usually are born a week earlier than single pregnancies."

Furthermore, there is some uncertainty as to how many calves will be born, Elsden said. "We can only tell at the earlier stages of pregnancy. We don't know to this day that both twins in each cow will continue on through term."

Last August, the CSU team used a new splitting and transfer process to implant embryos into crossbred heifers. By October, Elsden confirmed that cows were more than 60 days pregnant with twins. Two other cows were pregnant with one embryo each.

The CSU process involves inseminating a doner cow, collecting an embryo non-surgically, splitting the embryo and then placing the two halves into one or two recipient cows.

Scientists at Cambridge University in Great Britain already have produced identical calves from the same embryo. However, their techniques were much more complicated and unsuitable for routine use, said Dr. George Seidel, also of the embryo transfer project.

"There are other people who are doing embryo transfers," Seidel added. "Our contribution has been, primarily, to make embryo-splitting procedures more practical."

In the CSU process, a doner cow is inseminated artifically. About a week later, embryos are "flushed" from the cow using a non-surgical process.

After a few days, the embryo is cut in half inside its clear covering by using a microscope and a micro-manipulator equipped with tiny surgical tools. Timothy J. Williams, a post-doctoral fellow, developed the technique.

After the embryo is cut in half, one of the halves is sucked out of the covering with a pipette. This half is placed into another covering from which an unfertilized egg has been removed. The other half remains in the original covering.

Immediately after splitting, the two halves are ready to be placed in the recipient cow or cows.

Elsden said this is one of several ways to make a clone. Cloning, he added, is merely asexual reproduction, accomplished by replicating genetic material. Most people think cloning must involve transplanting cell nuclei.

The calves' births are the result of nearly 10 years of embryo transfer research at CSU and many years of work in other places. "The first successful embryo transfer was done in rabbits back in the 1880s," said Seidel. "They started working in cattle in the 1930s."

The first successful bovine embryo transfer was done in 1950. In that experiment, the donor cow was killed and the embryo collected and transferred surgically.

Embryo transfer reserach at CSU started in 1973. In 1976, Elsden developed the flushing technique for removing embryos non-surgically from donor cows.

Last year, Williams, Elsden and Seidel set out to find a simpler method to split embryos. "We were surprised at the success rates," Elsden admitted. "Usually in research you refine something over several years before it works."

The ability to produce identical twins will cut costs and speed up development in research aimed at improving livestock production, Seidel said. Identical twins are invaluable for studying sexual development and nutrition, two areas in which genetics affect animals' responses.

For instance, the first of CSU's cloned bull calves will be used to find out whether certain hormones cause bulls to reach puberty earlier.

ARL's Rupert Amann plans to use pairs of identical twin bull calves. One calf will receive hormonal treatment and the other will not. Amann will compare growth and sexual development within each set of twins over 18 months.

Such a study would be almost impossible without identical twins because variation in sexual development between animals is caused largely by hereditary factors, Amann said. "Normally, you would have to treat a large number of animals to make sure that the response is due to the treatment and not to genetic variation.

"With this approach, just a few animals are enough because they are genetically identical. Any difference has to be due to the treatment."

Identical twins also can be used in nutritional studies since much of an animal's response to various diets is caused by genetic factors, Seidel said.

When an embryo is split and its halves placed in two different cows, researchers also can test the effects of each recipient cow or the maternal effect on calf growth and development.

"For instance, does a calf grow fast because the mother gives a lot of milk or because it has the genes for fast growth?"

Elsden said the CSU team also can compare two halves of a split embryo, thanks to new embryo storage techniques developed recently. Embryos can be frozen in liquid nitrogen and stored for later transfer.

With the freezing technique, "We could cut a female embryo in half, put one in a cow and freeze the other half," Elsden said. After the cow gives birth and the "cloned" half grows into a heifer, the frozen embryo twin could be transferred into that heifer.

The twinning process has more practical and immediate applications, Seidel and Elsden said.

The success rate for transferring a single embryo is about 65 percent, meaning that 100 embryo transfers result in 65 pregnancies. Although the success rate now is only 50 percent for split embryo transfer, "if you split 100 embryos, you get 200 halves and 100 pregnancies. You get 100 calves instead of 65."

The splitting and transfer techniques will allow breeders in both the beef and dairy industries to improve cattle genetically. Since the first cows at CSU were successfully impregnated, Elsden said the team has split and transferred more than 200 half embryos including Herefords and Holsteins.

"We're going to get better bulls, much better selection," Elsden said. "It's going to improve the efficiency of beef production, which has been very low."

Right now the average livestock owner probably will not use embryo transfer because of the cost. "By the time the calf hits the ground, it costs about $2,500," Elsden said.

However, it costs the same to transfer one embryo or split embryos, so an owner can get two calves for the cost. Furthermore, the big cost in embryo transfer, keeping donor and recipient cows, is dropping rapidly with CSU's new freezing techniques.

The CSU team also is trying to develop an accurate method for determining sex of embryos.

With twinning, freezing and sexing techniques, "we're going to have frozen embryos in straws in liquid nitrogen on the farm, sexed so livestock breeders can produce the bull or heifer of their choice," Elsden said. "This isn't the near future, but it is the future.

Wet conditions limit fieldwork

HARRISBURG — Wet conditions prevailed over most of the Commonwealth during the latter part of the week ending May 23 limiting fieldwork statewide to four days, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Field activities included plowing, discing, spraying, making hay and haylage, harvesting rye for silage and green chop, harvesting asparagus, and planting corn, potatoes, soybeans, tomatoes, cabbage and peppers.

Although field activities were halted at mid-week, the wet conditions were welcomed as crops were beginning to show signs of moisture stress. Statewide, surface soil moisture was rated short to adequate.

At 93 percent complete, plowing is still slightly ahead of last year at this time, when it was 90 percent complete. Plowing is 90 percent complete in the northern region, 94 percent in the central region and virtually complete in the southern region

Planting of potatoes at 85 percent complete is only slightly ahead of last year at this time when 81 percent was planted. The northern region reported 68 percent planted, while potato planting was virtually complete in the central and southern regions.

Statewide, 35 percent of the soybean crop is planted compared with 20 percent last year. In the northern region 30 percent is planted, in the central region 25 percent is planted, and in the southern region 67 percent is planted

Corn planting at 79 percent complete is way ahead of last year and the five-year average, both at 62 percent In the northern region 71 percent is planted, in the central region 82 percent is planted, and in the southern region 83 percent is planted.

Statewide, 36 percent of the barley crop is in boot and 52 percent is headed compared with 39 percent in boot and 37 percent headed last year. In the north 52 percent is in boot and 32 percent is headed In the central region 35 percent is in boot and 58 percent is headed while in the southern region 25 percent is in boot and 60 percent is headed.

Wheat is 37 percent in boot and 16 percent headed compared with 43 percent in boot and five percent headed at this time last year In the north 19 percent is in boot and 19 percent is headed. In the central region, 49 percent is in boot and eight percent is headed, while in the southern region 41 percent is in boot and 20 percent is headed. Heavy infestations of powdery mildew have been reported in some areas.

Both alfalfa and clover-timothy stands were rated mostly fair to good, but in some locations yields for the first cut may be low due to the dry conditions. First crop alfalfa is nine percent cut with the major portion going for silage. Insect damage has been reported in some alfalfa stands. The amount of feed obtained from pasture was rated below average by 58 percent of our reporters, average by 40 percent and above average by two percent.

Penn State ag society honors Lancaster men

UNIVERSITY PARK — Gamma Sigma Delta, the honor society of agriculture, cited outstanding alumni, faculty, and students of the College of Agriculture at Penn State during a banquet here recently.

Alumni honored for attainments and taken into membership were Roland P. Gehman of Rl Stevens; James F. Pound of Brattleboro, VT.; and Harry F Roth of Landisville.

Roland Gehman, class of 1959 in agricultural engineering, is president of MGS, Inc., an engineering firm in Denver, Lancaster County. Gehman has served as chairman of the Pennsylvania Section of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and chairman of the North Atlantic Region of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers He is currently on the Agricultural Advisory Council of the College of Agriculture.

James Pound, class of 1950 in dairy science, is associated with the American Holstein Friesian Association. He was cited as being instrumental in strengthening and promoting the Holstein breed of dairy cattle nationally. His career has included service with the Cooperative Extension Service in Crawford and Blair counties. He served as sales manager with NASCO, a national farm supply company, and later with Young's Minerals at Roaring Springs.

Harry Roth, class of 1954 in dairy science, serves as operations manager for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, Lancaster. He has worked with the Cooperative Extension Service in York County Later he served as fieldman with the Western Pennsylvania Artificial Breeders Cooperative. He became breed programs director following a merger with Southeastern Cooperative He has been a member of the sire evaluation and genetic improvement committee—and the research committee—of the National Association of Animal Breeders.

Honored for exceptional research in the College of Agriculture was Jean-Marc Bollag, professor of soil microbiology. Bollag's research interests are three-fold. He studies microbial transformation of pesticides and other synthesized chemicals not occurring naturally (zenobiotics). Other work stresses the interactions of microorganisms and heavy metals. The third research area stresses nitrogen transformation by the denitrification process, wherein solid nitrogen compounds

Need a diversion?

CHAMBERSBURG — Protect that building or fields from erosion using a diversion.

Diversions are built across the slope to intercept water from the watershed above and carry it to a well-established outlet. A diversion is a graded mound of soil on the lower side of a channel with a pre-determined height and grade. It can be blended into the terrain so that it may be mowed and maintained.

A diversion is usually constructed around buildings to protect from surface water and in fields to reduce erosion on steep slopes, according to David T Hoffman, soil conservation technician with the Chambersburg office of the USDA Soil Conservation Service.

Anyone interested in more information on controlling erosion or runoff with the use of a diversion should contact their local Soil Conservation Service office.

So you need more milk from every ton you feed. And you get it.

Alfalfa hay and haylage are your best source of protein — and a lot more economical than commercial protein. But the only way to get maximum performance, from the good alfalfa you grow, is with balanced nutrition. Alfalfa is low in phosphorus and other nutrients your cows need for maximum performance. Vigortone's potent dairy pre-mixes fortify your ration with the proper amount of phosphorus, vitamins, minerals and all other nutrients important to good nutrition. You get more nutrition into your cows — and more milk production out. Get complete details and a feeding recommendation soon.

VIGORTONE™

When you make feed at home, your money stays at home.

Milkerendum results may roll next week

HARRISBURG — A spokesman for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture expressed optimism, yesterday, that the department will have some indication of the milkerendum results by the end of next week.

"We had hoped to have something by this week," said spokesman Kevin Hickey. But he explained the tabulation is a multi-faceted process which includes not only counting yeas and nays but totaling milk volume and cross-checking co-ops' bloc votes versus individual ballots to avoid duplication. By law the department is required to announce the referendum results within a 30-day period.

By Wednesday, PDA received 8,615 of the 15,544 ballots mailed to state dairy farmers. All ballots will be reviewed and sorted by hand and adding machines will be used for actual counting of votes and volume of milk. According to state Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell an appointed three-man teller committee is overseeing the opening, counting and certification of all ballots.

The teller committee is composed of Glenn Ellenberger, James Fink and Robert Stover. The three men were chosen for their personal integrity and their well-known concern for the future of Pennsylvania agriculture, Hallowell said.

The committee will be assisted by three clerks from the Comptroller's Office of the Department of Environmental Resources cluster. The clerks will be under the supervision of Joseph Lawruk, chief of auditing and special accounting for the Comptroller's Office. Throughout the tallying of the vote, the Comptroller's Office will retain possession of all ballots to insure the integrity of the process.

Held in accordance with provisions of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act, the referendum, if approved, will expand efforts in advertising promotion and research to increase sales and consumption of milk. A majority of the farmers voting is needed for the program's approval.

If defeated, some speculate a future referendum would not be approached for awhile.

"I doubt you would see another attempt at a referendum for some time," commented Paul Hand, economist for Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative.

In other state dairy news, Governor Thornburgh recently announced the appointment of J. Robert Derry of Penn Run, Indiana County, to serve as a member of the Milk Marketing Board.

The three-member panel of the MMB regulates the entire milk industry, including production, manufacture, processing, storage, transportation, disposal, distribution and sale of milk and milk products.

Derry, 59, is the executive director of the United Way of Indiana county. He was employed by the Borden Company from 1947-64 and was later named vice president and general manager of Borden's Puerto Rico Dairies, in San Juan, and was assistant to the general manager of Borden's Midwest Division in Pittsburgh.

Upon Senate confirmation, Derry will serve until May 1987, replacing Donald Lanius, whose term expired.

are volatilized. Noted in his profession, Bollag receives invitations to lecture at numerous universities around the world

Honored for outstanding teaching was Thomas L. Watschke, professor of turfgrass science Noted for undergraduate teaching of turfgrass courses, he has taught 4,000 credit hours over the past 12 years. Watschke designed and wrote a vest-pocket guide to turfgrass identification. He co-advises baccalaureate students and winter course students each year. He has been co-advisor of the Penn State Turf Club. His research projects deal with weed control, growth regulation, the physical and chemical activities of plants (physiology), microclimate, and nutrition.

Achievements with the Cooperative Extension Service brought honors to Joseph A. McCurdy, professor of agricultural engineering extension. McCurdy's programs and leadership over 32 years of service were described as assisting agriculture in many areas including rural electrification, grain and hay drying, fruit and vegetable storage, emergency power supply, 4-H electric activities, animal shelter ventilation, energy conservation, and stray voltage problems. His work with Pennsylvania potato growers was listed as enabling growers to store potatoes longer than usual with less shrinkage than previously-producing high quality.

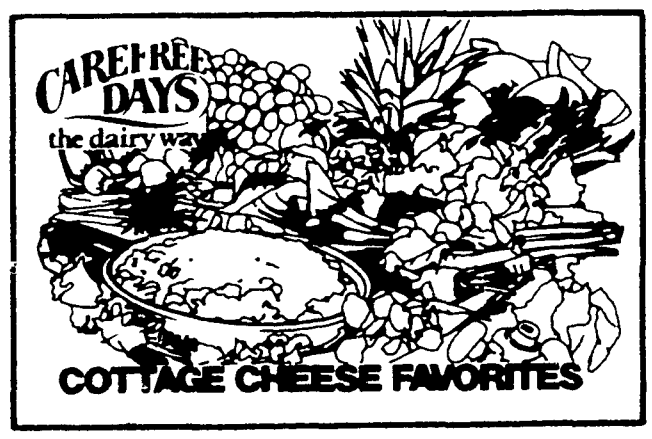
The senior scholarship award of an engraved watch went to Russell C. Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M Lloyd of 26 Creek Drive, Doylestown Lloyd is graduating in forest science.

The annual junior citation of $100 went to Frederick J Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold D Kelley of 212 W. Third Street, Oil City. Kelley is majoring in animal production.

The sophomore award of a pen and pencil desk set went to Ray L. Smith, son of Jack R. Smith of 58 Hex Acre, R1, West Pittston. Smith is majoring in agronomy.

Penn State faculty members initiated into Gamma Sigma Delta were Jean-Marc Bollag in agronomy. Dr. Lawrence J Hutchinson in veterinary science extension; B Wayne Kelly in farm management extension, Dr L. Dwight Schwartz in veterinary science extension; Lawrence W Specht in dairy science extension, and Francis H. Witham in horticulture.

Elected officers for 1982-1983 were president, Samuel H. Smith, dean of the College of Agriculture; vice president, Thomas L. Merritt in animal science, secretary-treasurer, Donald V. Waddington in agronomy, and historian, C Terry Morrow in agricultural engineering



PFU praises swine ID

HARRISBURG — The executive director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union praised the state Department of Agriculture and Secretary Penrose Hallowell for the implementation of new swine health rules requiring identification of feeder pigs, market hogs and breeding swine.

The regulations, which took effect May 19, are designed to help control the movement of swine in the state in order to control the spread of contagious diseases to other herds

"The need for an identification system for hogs is long overdue," said state director Carl L. Kaufman. "We are very pleased to see Secretary Hallowell implementing this program. Farmers Union hog farmers have advocated a mandatory identification system because of problems with tuberculosis and pseudorabies affecting their herds after sales With these regulations in place, diseased swine can be traced back to the source farm."

At its annual meeting in February, delegates to the Farmers Union convention approved a mandatory identification system for swine The family farm organization also recommended that all breeding stock offered for sale be checked for pseudorabies within 30 days prior to the date of sale.

Every producer and swine finishing operation in the state will be issued a herd identification number which will be registered with the Agriculture Department, according to Secretary Hallowell.

The identification can be in the form of an ear tattoo, backslap tattoo or ear tag Tattooing is the most reliable method of permanent identification

The family farm organization urged all hog farmers to contact the Department of Agriculture for additional information Telephone the Bureau of Animal Industries at 717-783-5301

Hybridist finds "second life" at Verde Vista

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

"Verde Vista" he calls this place, for verdant views of beautiful outdoor scenery.

Outside his home, nestled against the hardwood-covered hill that juts steeply up from a gurgling brook, the shaded glade is lush with the glossy greenery of rhododendrons and their lighter-leaved cousins, the azaleas.

Around the picturesque bridge across the little glen, and over the sloping hillsides for several acres, hundreds of giant bright bloom clusters dot the greenery with brilliant shades of rose, orchid, lavendar, red, cream and a cheerful yellow here and there. Their vibrant healthiness, and striking beauty is breathtaking, almost beyond description.

This is the home haven and workplace of W. David Smith, R3, Spring Grove, a famous hybridizer and rhododendrons and their subspecies, azaleas. The experitse of this modest 79-year-old is sought around the country.

Ironically, Smith never studied horticulture.

At age 12, he was already an accomplished artist, and held a show of his paintings. Later he spent several years in college, pursuing a variety of degree majors. Today, he jokes that he took just about any course he could to avoid studying chemistry, one pursuit that probably could have added to his hybridizing background.

His love for music eventually led Smith to the stage, whe. he became a noted concert pianist and performer. With the stage name of Oslaf Trygvasson, this career took him on extensive concert tours, and he toured with the famed pianist and composer Percy Granger, who also served as a teacher to Smith But when he was 45, a broken hand ended his music career

As Smith's music career ended, his "second life," as he puts it, was born.

"I can't say why I like rhododendrons, and no other flower," he reflects. A native of Dunmore, Lackawanna County, Smith became familiar with the showy broad-leaved plants at his home in the Poconos. Those rhododendrons and azaleas were of the common wild varieties.

After acquiring a few azalea plants from a Stroudsburg nursery, Smith's interest was whetted. Later he added others, including 360 plants from Alabama. A lean-to was constructed, and outgrown, and a greenhouse added to extend the growing season.

W. David Smith, azalea and rhododendron hybridist, has raised some 150,000 seedlings during his plant breeding career. Many are nurtured along in the greenhouse that joins his home set amid the beautiful plants.

Smith is half joking, half serious, as he calls these beloved blooms he's create his "children."

Crossing winter-hardy plants with more tender varieties, Smith has always sought to breed hybrids that would combine the best genes of the parents into offspring with spectacular blooms and exceptional winter-hardiness.

"After 25 years of breeding, I learned that what I was doing at the beginning had been done in Belgium over a hundred years before," he says.

Best of those early crosses was "Coccicna Speciosa," a duplicate of the Ghent cross and a specimen still thriving in one of Smith's four garden areas in the valley near Spring Grove. But that specimen will not root cuttings, nor seed since it's a hybrid, and Smith's been unable to reproduce that particular success since. An attempt at air-layering may be the next step in trying to culture cuttings of the rare plant.

"I never learned what couldn't be done," explains Smith, noting that his lack of horticulture "do's and "don't's" allowed him to experiment with some unusual crossings that resulted in unique new varieties.

He's raised 150,000 seedlings during his hybridizing years, as many as 15,000 in some years during the past.

Rhododendron seeds are tiny, "like pepper," Smith says, and generally take five years to produce a plant large enough to form the first bloom that is a critical test of its worth. Azalea seeds usually take three years to bloom.

After careful evaluation of each seedling, often as few as just one or two per hundred are kept for the hybridizing gardens, and the rest discarded. Those selected must meet rigid standards on bloom size, color and time of opening, fragrance, plant habit, foliage, and winter hardiness.

Detailed "pedigree' information and results on each promising seedling is painstakingly recorded, about two pages worth per plant, filling several notebooks.

When a seedling has finally passed all Smith's strict requirements and is deemed worthy of being registered with the plant societies, a name must be chosen for the new creation, and its bloom and foliage colors must be matched up with registry color chart.

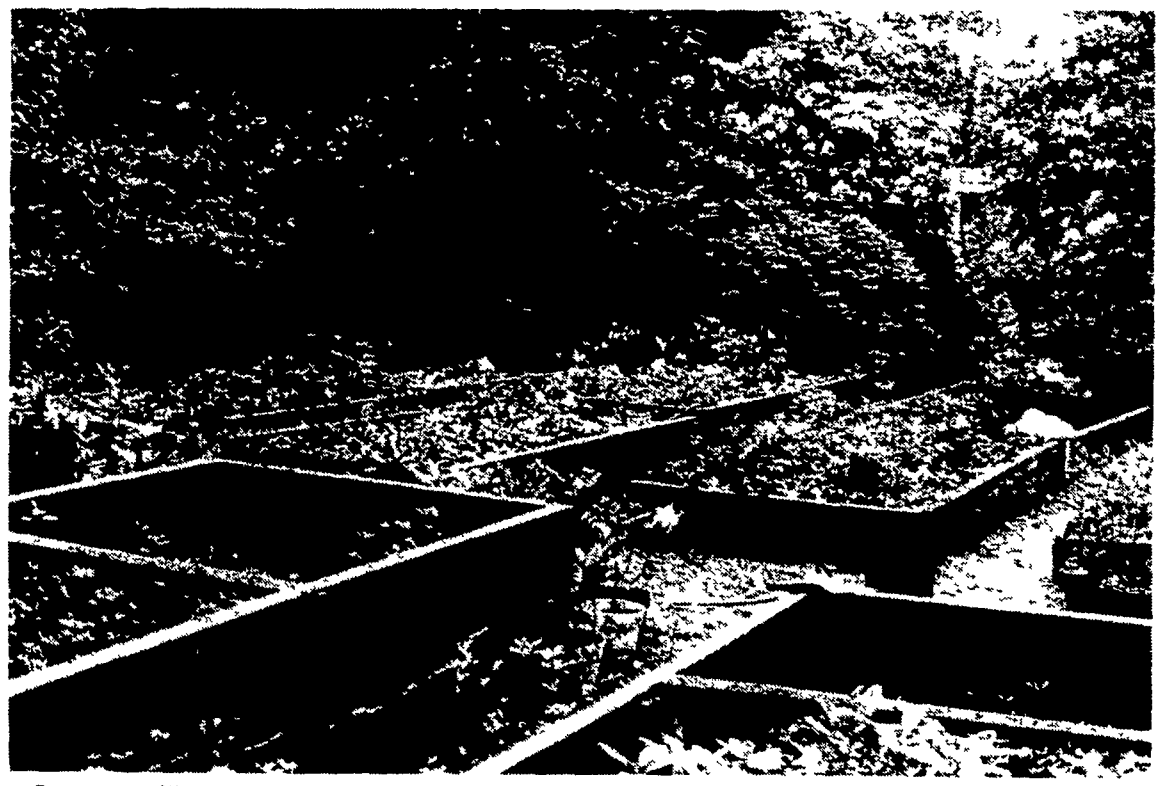
"Nature doesn't make her colors according to those of man," Smith laments, flipping through stacks of charts of rainbow colors in every hue imaginable.

Smith has named well over 200 azalea hybrids, and 77 rhododendrons. Some are named after friends, but the hybridizer says the bloom character must remind him of that friend. One azalea was dubbed "Dancing Butterflies" after a gardening assistant spied the shrub in bloom and thought it was covered with the glossamer fliers.

The azalea introductions go under the broad name of Eden Hybrids, while rhododendron enthusiasts recognize the label Susquehanna Valley Hybrids as having originated from Smith's work.

(Turn to Page B4)

Homestead Notes



Some seedlings are grown outside in raised beds above an old clay tennis court. Growing medium is heavy in peat moss and perlite, since rhododendron species can be drowned when not properly drained.

Some of Smith's oldest rhododendrons now tower above his over-six-feet frame. He says no one plant is a favorite, any more than any single child is a parent's favorite.

Hybridist at Verde Vista

"I've never been satisfied; I've always wanted to make them better," the hybridizer admits of his intense, never-ending search for improved seedlings

Among his goals is the breeding of a yellow evergreen azalea, and the developing of selected azaleas as houseplants Smith would also like to continue increasing the hues in the color range, and add fragrance to this largely non-fragrant species.

"I've created some 'monsters' already," he chuckles. "Then I have to go back to a certain point in the crosses and start over."

But you can't hurry the maturing time of plants, although one season can be gained by using the greenhouse.

"Time is so precious," Smith sighs. "And there is still so much to be done."

His years of careful obervation and volumes of written records have led him to develop some theories on genetics. Smith believes that the female parent of hybrid crosses has greater influence on the overall plant habit, while the male genetic material lends more to the bloom character

Heavy emphasis is placed on winter hardiness. Smith has observed that his early blooming varieties aren't disturbed by unseasonably cold weather in early fall, because new growth has had time to mature and harden. But late winter warm spells will break their bud dormancy, and the bud may blast. Later bloomers, on the other hand, aren't as readily affected by February warm spells, but are more susceptible to mid-fall heavy freezes.

Smith's love for these plants, each one a "child" of his creation, is the moving force of the widower's active life. He does some writing and lecturing, and still attends various rhododendron-related functions

Although a rhododendron breeder for 25 years before he belonged to any organized group, he's now a member of four Rhododendron Societies, and recently started a chapter in the York area Smith is a fellow in the celebrated Royal Horticultural Society based in England and a member of the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens where his expertise is sometimes sought

In all of his years of growing rhododendrons, Smith says he has never seen a winter as harsh as was this past one One day especially is imprinted in his memory, when the temperature was extremely cold, and the wind chill was a reported minus-50 degrees He shutters when remembering that the snow blew parallel, first from one direction, then rapidly shifting and coming the opposite way.

Although Smith's Eden and Susquehanna Valley hybrids are selected to withstand severe temperatures, he admits that day was a low point of his career.

"It was most discouraging. I thought I'd lost everything. The leaves were all curled and some looked black," he says of the near disaster. Many of his specimens are still one-of-a-kind, and almost a half-century of work hung in the balance.

Although a few plants suffered severe damage, and others had some leaf burn and blasted buds, the bulk of the specimens withstood the Arctic blasts well It was a sort of ultimate test that Smith philsophically figures "separated the sheep from the goats."

Plants at Verde Vista get no coddling, and Smith avoids spraying or feeding More important, he believes, is to prepare the soil well at the original planting time, working in quantities of peat moss, perhaps some perlite, and cottonseed meal for nitrogen. He recommends that beds be prepared in the fall, and left for spring planting giving organic materials time to decompose.

Good drainage is essential, since the rhododendron species are fairly shallow-rooted and can drown with overwatering in heavy, clay soils. But several of Smith's giant old plants, plus many in raised seedling beds, thrive in a several-inch deep layer of the soil mix spread over an old clay tennis court on the property

If gardeners have rhododendron or azalea plants that show signs of yellowing, Smith recommends watering them with a solution of weak tea, weak epsom salts water, or pouring on used coffee and tea grounds to help correct soil deficiency

Walking on the paths through his four shaded garden areas, Smith points out bloom and foliage characteristics of various specimens. Gazing toward the acres of beautiful blooms and greenery, he quietly wishes that there was someone, some young person, whom he could teach, who would understand the immeasurable value of these plants and who would continue this labor of love

"Don't say what I've accomplished," he chides, modestly turning away accolades for the beauty he's added to earth

"What's more important is what still has to be done"

LANCASTER — It's not too soon to plan your specialty for the third annual Pennsylvania Vegetable Recipe Contest. Final judging will be held August 25 during Penn State's Ag Progress Days at Rock Springs, just west of State College The deadline for your entry is July 16.

You can submit any original vegetable recipe that uses fresh Pennsylvania grown vegetables as the main ingredient. It will be judged for taste, ease of preparation and practicality, originality, and appearance. All recipe instructions must be clear and be specific about ingredients. The number of servings the recipe produces and how long the dish takes to prepare should be clearly stated.

All Pennsylvanians 18 years or older and without professional food status are invited to enter After entries are received, judges will select the top twelve and notify final contenders by mid-August. Finalists will then take their completed dish to Ag Progress where facilities for reheating entries will be available. All expenses are born by contestants

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

You can't call your place an honest-to-goodness, genuine farm unless it has a share of barn cats Why, trying to run a farm without an abundance of the fuzzy, purring felines is downright unnatural It's almost unpatriotic, even.

At least that's what my kids believe.

Never fear We are highly liberal on the subject of farm cats, having counted noses as high as thirty during one memorable year

But the problem lies in distinguishing between "barn cats" and "pet" cats. And I'll admit to being part of the problem. One of those people who never learns to leave well enough alone, I confess at times to having crouched in dark, dusty places where recluse barn cats live trying to tame them enough to pet

Our youngsters go even further Only if every cat on the place were reclining in cuddled comfort on my homemade afghan on the living room couch would they believe that all was truly right with the world.

"Every barn cat deserves to be loved" is their theme, and they pursue it to the utmost. Such philosophy generally results in our having an abundance of pet cats, and doggone few barn cats.

Now, there is one. Her name is "Mom," which has proved to be a mis-nomer. "Mom," who gave birth to four earlier this year, dragged her children around the barn in such wanderlust that she lost them eventually

She's now back endlessly prowling the barn for rats and mice We've concluded that she is a Professional Barn Cat, and motherhood was just too much to combine with her career.

A threatened kitten void has been comfortably filled by Muffy, Tuffy, Fluffy, Puffy, Huffy, Moldy, and Peanut. Those are the seven offspring of the devoted calico, Sunny, who brought forth the five yellows, one gray tiger, and, as labeled, one "moldy" colored, kittens

Rescued from a box about seven feet up on a shelf in the woodshed, where they threatened to tumble to the ground, this roly-poly family is thoroughly and systematically demolishing my newly-planted bed of daylilies. Runt of the litter, at a bare half-size of her siblings, is Peanut, the most feisty six-inch cat I've ever had claw her way up my leg.

Four more adorable fluffs tumble about the calf pen floor, causing me to take uncommonly long to get through the chores.

And, somewhere in hiding nearby, at least five more kittens I'm sure have been born to our twice-annually litter producer, Mustache. From past history, we know she'll present them to us only when she's good and ready, and we haven't found them yet.

Wouldn't getting a kitten be a nice way to start the summer?

I know just where there's a lovely selection

Gelatin molds provide cool summer dessert

Gelatin molds are a great dish idea that come out of the refrigerator, not off the hot range What a pleasant way to serve a summer dessert!

Molds can be a variety of colors depending on the flavor gelatin used, and their potential is limitless You can flank them with lettuce, whipped cream, or fruits, and you can add fruits to the center. Some molds even call for marshmallows and nuts.

Gelatin molds now offer almost the variety that cake pans do. Fish, butterfly, hat, heart and decorative molds are all available in the store now. And gelatin molds offer sometimes half the calories as desserts.

But before serving this dish, you need to solve the problem of getting it unmolded. First, dip the mold in warm water for a few seconds, and it should slip out smoothly. Second, loosen the ring around the edge of the mold with a knife to let in air.

And what about the empty space in the center of most gelatin molds? Try filling it with cucumbers, dairy sour cream, pineapples, or what ever suits your tastebuds.

GELATIN-VEGE SALAD

1 box lemon gelatin (3 oz.)
1 c. boiling water
2 t. vinegar
7 to 10 ice cubes
1/2 c. shredded carrot
1/4 c. diced celery
1/2 c. shredded cabbage
1 t. chopped green pepper

Dissolve gelatin completely in boiling water. Add vinegar and ice cubes. Stir constantly until thickened, about 3 minutes. Remove any unmelted ice. Fold in cabbage, carrot, celery, and green pepper. Chill in large dish or mold about 1 hour.

Mrs. Charles Biehl, Mertztown

COTTAGE TOMATO RING

2 1/4 c. tomato juice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 t. sugar
1/4 t salt
1/4 t. onion salt
1/4 t Worcestershire sauce
1 c ground ham
1 c shredded Swiss cheese
1/2 c chopped celery
2 T chopped green pepper

Soften gelatin in 1 cup juice in a 1 1/2-quart saucepan, heat over low heat, stirring occasionally, until gelatin is dissolved Remove from heat Stir in remaining juice, sugar, salt, onion, salt and Worcestershire sauce; chill until partially set. Fold in ham, cheese, cottage cheese, celery and green pepper. Turn into 4 1/2-cup mold; chill until firm.

GELATIN SALAD

Use 11x3/4x7 1/4 inch pan
First Layer.
1 pkg. lemon gelatin
1 pkg. orange gelatin
2 c. hot water

Dissolve lemon and orange gelatin in hot water. Add 1 1/2 c. of cold water. Add.
3 diced bananas
about 60 mini marshmallows small can drained crushed pineapples
Chill.
Second Layer
Blend:
1 c pineapple juice
1/2 c. sugar
2 T. flour
1 egg

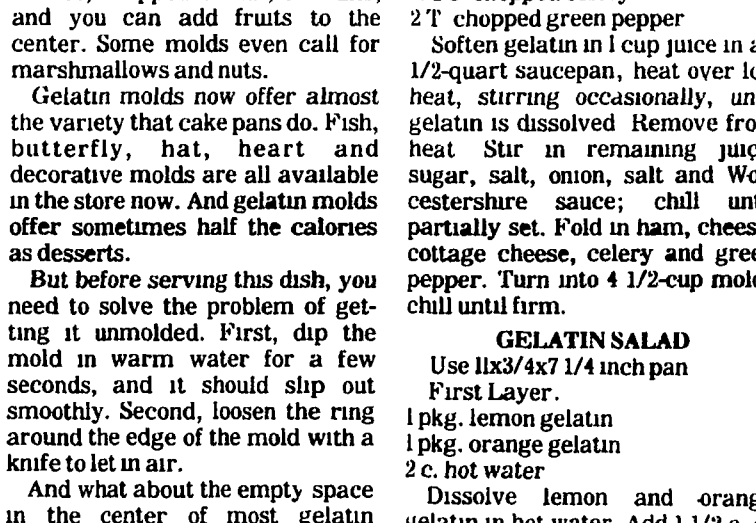
Cook until thick. Cool and spread over first layer.

Third Layer:

Soften 1 small pkg. cream cheese. Whip 1 pkg. whipped topping. Then add softened cream cheese and mix well. Spread over salad and garnish with chopped walnuts.

Mrs. Charles Biehl, Mertztown

Cottage Tomato Ring is a great main dish idea that comes out of the refrigerator, not off the range. Cottage cheese, Swiss cheese and ground ham swirl through rosy tomato juice in a gelatin base for this salad/meal.



ANSWER — Carolyn Hess and other cake lovers can find a recipe made from scratch at the end of the recipe section. Thanks to Mrs. Samuel Zook for sending us her Marble Cake recipe.

QUESTION — We are still waiting for an answer to the following request. Can anyone help? Can anyone tell me when to pick gooseberries? Other gooseberry facts I'd like to know are: Do they get picked green or when they turn pink? Why are pies made with these berries so sour? And, what are some ways to use the gooseberries.

BEET SALAD

2 pkg. lemon gelatin
2 c. water
1 1/2 c. beet juice
2 c. diced beets
1 c. chopped celery
4 T vinegar
1 t. salt
2 T horseradish
4 t. scraped onion

Combine all ingredients. Pour into mold. Chill.

Mrs. Charles Biehl, Mertztown

INDIANA SALAD

Part I
2 boxes lime jello
4 c. hot water

When starting to set, add one cup crushed pineapple.

Part II:
2 c. cream, whipped

Add vanilla.

1 six-oz. pkg. cream cheese

Beat until smooth. Put on jello when hard.

PartIII.

Take fruit juice. Add water till you have 1 1/2 cups. Add:
1 c. sugar
3 egg yolks
3 level T. flour

Cook one pinch salt together till smooth and put on top.

Barbara Stolzfus, Quarryville

ORANGE CHIFFON MOLD

1 env. unflavored gelatin
3/4 c. sugar divided
1/8 t. salt
2 egg, separated
1/2 c. cold water
1 can (6 oz.) frozen concentrated orange juice, kept frozen
1 c. heavy cream, whipped
optional orange sections, strawberries

Mix gelatin, 1/2 c. sugar, and salt in saucepan. Beat together egg yolk and water. Stir into gelatin mixture Place over low heat, stir constantly until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Add frozen orange juice concentrate. Stir until melted. Mixture should mound when dropped from a spoon. If it doesn't, chill slightly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Gradually add remaining 1/4 c. sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatin mixture Fold in whipped cream. Turn the mold and chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream, orange sections and strawberries.

Carolyn Hess, Lititz

CREAM CHEESE GELATIN MOLD

1 large pkg. apricot gelatin
1 1/2 c. boiling water
20 oz. can of crushed pineapple
1 c. chopped celery, carrots
1 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/2 large container of whipped topping

Mix together apricot gelatin and boiling water. Add pineapple and chill. After chilling, add celery, carrots, and cream cheese. Chill again, well. Fold in whipped topping and chill again.

Following is an answer in response to Cook's Question Corner:

MARBLE CAKE

2 1/4 c. granulated sugar
3/4 c. lard
pinch of salt
1 1/2 c. cold water or milk
4 1/2 c. sifted flour
4 1/2 t. baking powder
6 egg whites, beaten stiff

Chocolate Mix:
3/4 c. cocoa
6 T. sugar
3/4 c. hot water

Mix and cool.

Add 3/4 t. soda and 1 1/2 t. vanilla.

Mix with 1/2 of first mixture. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour. This makes a large cake.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My first sugar peas and strawberries were ready for picking this week By next week I'll be knee-deep in harvesting these crops They each need to be picked every other day

As the berries are picked at the peak of ripeness, they must be sold the same day When I phone someone for an order and I'm told that the box which I sold them last week is still in the refrigerator, it makes me sick You see, I like to sell them while they are still sparkling with the blush of freshness

If you like watercress but don't have a fresh spring or brook nearby, I'd recommend growing garden cress It can be sown year round and eaten in just 10 days from seeding It is slow to bolt and therefore can be cut and it will grow back for weeks

The children keep urging me to plant less space in the garden But somehow this year we've planted even more There is now a large plot behind the house planted with 150 asparagus roots, one row of potatoes, one row of cantaloupes and watermelons and one row of bush limas The reason for the limas is due to mistake made by the seed company When I opened a bag marked Kentucky Wonder Beans," I discovered that they'd put in limas instead So I planted them and am hoping that I'll get too as we like them a lot and they bear large, green pods for a long time

The middle of May I put in rows of gladiolas, dahlias and non-hardy lilies I also seeded many annual flowers but how well they fare is yet to be seen It has been quite dry for a few weeks and I've laid a soaker hose in my garden It is a lot of work to move it over a large area but I'm hoping it will be worth the effort

For the avid gardener

Beating the "System"

Do you feel manipulated and milked dry by the "System"? Are you looking for a legitimate tax loophole or a sure-fire weapon to fight inflation? Or perhaps for homebased recreation to save on expensive gasoline?

Home gardeners already have the answers and are using them to fight back. Gardening provides a tax loophole for the average American, one of the few not subject to IRS audit. Vegetables from your home food garden aren't taxable. You can even barter garden produce for other useful goods, according to National Garden Bureau, Inc., from Sycamore, Il.

The cost of growing your own is still reasonable as compared to the cost of purchasing fresh or processed produce. A skillful gardener can harvest vegetables worth ten times his or her yearly investment in seeds and supplies.

Budget-conscious and conservation-minded citizens are planning to spend more weekends at home this summer. The National Garden Bureau, a garden seed trade educational organization, reports that sales of vegetable seed packets have never been stronger. Furthermore, sales of flower seed packets are keeping pace because more people are planning to "fix up the place" with beds of flowers.

The demand for community garden plots is increasing rapidly, unfortunately at a time when county and city park budgets are being squeezed. Consequently, some churches and other institutions with spare land are moving in to fill the gap. But, for the foreseeable future, the major growth in gardening will be among families who have land around their homes. Community garden plots still make up only a small part of the land devoted to food gardens.

The National Garden Bureau doesn't expect an immediate shift in the motivation for food gardening. First and foremost, Americans garden for the joy of it. They like the good feeling of working in the soil and the fulfillment of producing healthful foods with one's own hands, especially farmers, who enjoy the experience on a larger scale.

But, oh, the allure of a tax-free, inflation-proof food factory right in your own backyard! A beginning home gardener can harvest fifty cents in retail value of produce from every square foot of garden space. Experienced gardeners regularly top one dollar per square foot per gardening season. No wonder home gardeners are such a cheerful lot!

Happy face adds surprise to aerial photograph

CHICORA — "Gray skies are gonna' clear up, put on a happy face," advises a popular Broadway show tune. But when two young Chicora, Pa., brothers put on "happy face" on the family pasture, little did they know that clear skies and the "eyes" of the U.S. Geological Survey would enable their agricultural art to be preserved on film.

The episode began on the evening of May 7, 1981, when Tony and David Manculich mowed a 380-foot diameter face into the pasture prior to full cutting of the field the next day

It occurred to the boys that pilots and passengers of airplanes passing overhead might spot their large-scale "Smiley" but they never considered the possibility that early the next morning a high-altitude aircraft contracted to the USGS National High Altitude Photography Program (NHAP) would snap a photo of their creation from 40,000 feet in the air.

Several months later, technicians at the USGS Earth Resources Observation Systems Data Center near Sioux Falls, S.D., noticed a tiny happy face on a frame of film.

The technicians first suspected vandalism of the film, but after careful examination of both the black-and-white and color-infrared frames, they determined that the face was a feature on the ground

Identification numbers on the film frame that correspond with the appropriate 1:250,000-scale map sheet made it easy to pinpoint the location of the happy face as just west of Chicora in Butler County.

The EROS technicians mentioned the happy face to the data center's community affairs officer, who contacted the superintendent of schools in Chicora, seeking information on who the artist or artists might be

When Tony and David Manculich cut this giant "Happy Face" into the grass of a pasture on the family farm near Chicora, Pa., they didn't know it would be photographed by a high-altitude mapping aircraft of the U.S. Geological Survey. With a diameter of approximately 380 feet, the happy face showed up clearly on film exposed at an altitude of 40,000 feet. In the photograph, east, rather than north is up, showing the happy face just west of Chicora.

A return letter from Joseph E Fair, Chicora Elementary School principal, informed EROS personnel that the mystery artists were Tony Manculich, 14, and his brother David, 12. Fair added that students at the school were thrilled to learn that the Manculich boys' happy face had been preserved for posterity and that they were anxious to learn more about how the photo was taken

A return packet of prints from the black-and-white and color-infrared film, specific information on when and from what altitude the Chicora photo was taken, and general information on the NHAP program gave students at Chicora Elementary School and the Karns City, Pa , Junior High School an impromptu lesson in photographic science and mapping

Prints of the happy face also were sent to the Manculich family, who were surprised to see that the boys' artwork showed up so clearly on photos taken from "so far up "

Tony and David said they created the happy face by holding a 200-foot piece of binder twine taut from a center point and setting pegs around the outer radius of the circle to serve as guides for the mowing machine. After they had cut the circle outline, they made a curved pass through part of the circle for the smile, and cut in two eyes Later in the summer the boys went over the outline with a plow, so the happy face was in place throughout the winter months.

Although Tony and David said they would like to create more pasture art this summer, the results of their efforts won't be photography by NHAP. Under terms of the program, which began in 1980, each area depicted on a film frame (approximately 130 square miles for black-and-white or 68 square miles for color-infrared) will be photographed only once every five years "First pass" coverage for the continental United States is expected to be complete by the end of 1985

Black-and-white or color-infrared prints of those areas photographed to date are available from the EROS Data Center, U.S Geological Survey, Sioux Falls, S.D 57198 Persons wishing to learn if their area has been photographed and if the photos are available for purchase from EROS should contact the following USGS National Georgraphic Information Center, Reston, Va., (507 or 536 National Center, 22092, telephone 703-860-6045 or 703-860-6336)

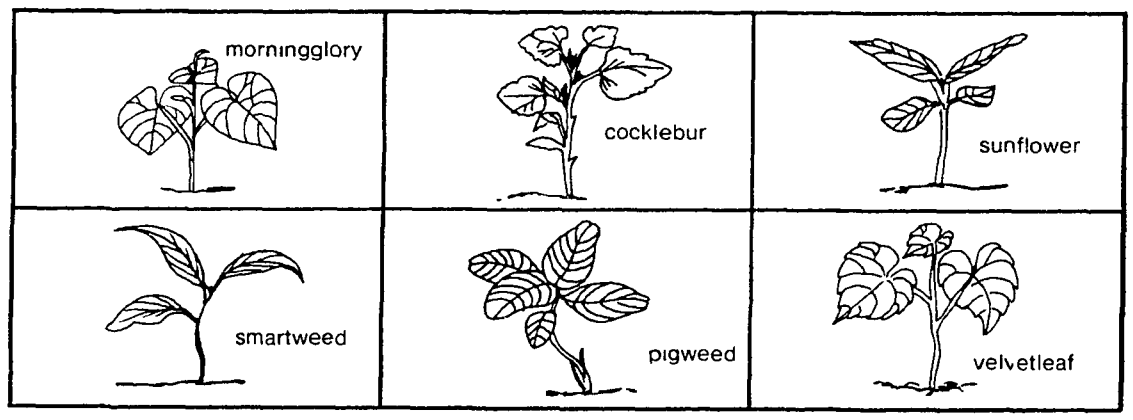
Pick the weeds in your corn you'd like to get rid of...



Then pick Banvel® herbicide... the Big Plus...to do the job.

Pre-emergence: Banvel tank-mixed with *Lasso® to get broadleaf weeds along with grasses...ready and waiting when later weeds germinate.

Early layby (in corn up to five inches high): use Banvel at a one pint rate. Stop weeds before they've had a chance to develop. This Banvel overlay controls cocklebur, sunflower, annual morningglory, other troublemakers.

Post-emergence (corn up to 36 inches): Banvel herbicide controls the real problems—like smartweed, velvetleaf, bindweed, and seedling Canada thistle.

Before buying a less adaptable herbicide that may be short on performance, check out the Big Plus of Banvel...from Velsicol.

4-H launches farm animal program

MEDIA — Sun Refining and Marketing Company of Marcus Hook was recently recognized as the first private corporation to give major financial support to the Delaware County 4-H Food Production Education Program, according to Delaware County agent, C.R. Bryan

H.G. "Corky" Johnson, refinery manager, was presented the "Friend of 4-H Award" plaque on May 17, when he visited the 4-H Center in conjunction with the demonstration/study trip by 4-H members from Marcus Hook Elementary School.

The 52 students in Hope Petrosky's and Judy Gerbron's third grade classes are all studying about their food supply and how farm animals are raised.

This new program, conducted through 4-H in Delaware County, is called the 4-H Food Production Education Program. It is an innovative approach to teaching young people about commercial food production, animal agriculture, the importance of American agriculture in the national and world economy, and proper personal nutrition.

According to Bud Bryan, Delaware County 4-H coordinator, the need for this type of educational program for third through sixth grade classes was demonstrated by many requests from school teachers over the years. He and Bruce Richards, county 4-H agent, are responsible for implementing the program

The 4-H Center at Rose Tree Park, North of Media, is the site where live farm animals are housed in realistic replicas of commercial livestock production facilities. This facility is provided by Delaware County Council as part of the 4-H educational offering of the county Extension Service. The 4-H staff are employees of Penn State University who provide educational materials, teacher training and instruction for students on a full day visit to the 4-H Center Teachers in public and private schools integrate the food production lessons into their regular classes, complimenting social studies, science, health and home economics with positive new learning experiences

The first 4-H groups to complete their field trip were two classes from Wallingford Elementary School on March 25 Since then, 350 students have completed the 4-H Food P.E.P. project with 500 more anticipated completing by the end of the school year

Two "Open House" days are scheduled at the 4-H center for people who want to see and learn about the cattle, chickens, sheep and pigs housed there On Wednesday, June 2, a nursery school and kindergarten day will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tours will be

Manor FFA hosts Farm-City tour

MILLERSVILLE — The Manor FFA Chapter of Penn Manor High School took the first grade students of Eshleman Elementary School, Millersville, to the Glenn Burkholder dairy farm, Washington Boro, on Friday, May 21, for the chapter's annual Farm-City Week observance

Thirteen members of the Manor FFA accompanied the first graders to the Burkholder farm.

The FFA members showed the students the many different types of livestock found on the farm, including dairy and beef cattle, chickens, pigs, lambs and rabbits.

"It was a new first-hand learning experience for most of the students," explained Tanya Green, Manor FFA member who served as one of the tour guides at the farm.

"The children really seemed interested in the different animals"

Following the tour of the farm and the viewing of the various animals, the elementary students were treated to ice cream with their lunch.

In the afternoon, the elementary pupils were given the opportunity to bottle feed a dairy calf. A kickball game and racing relays rounded out the recreational portion of the day-long program.

Kutztown club holds educational ag tour

KUTZTOWN — The Kutztown FFA Club participated in its annual educational trip on Tuesday, May 18, visiting seven different places in the Collegeville area.

Among locations visited were Hatfield Packing Company, MOPAC Beef Packing Company, Delaware Valley College Farms, Valley Forge, Ott's Greenhouse, Walebe Farms, and Collegeville Smorgasbord.

The first stop was at Hatfield Packing Company. The club was taken on a tour of the plant and saw how hogs are butchered and meat is processed Afterward, there were doughnuts and hot chocolate available for the members.

The second stop was at MOPAC Beef Packing Company. The group toured the operation and saw how beef are slaughtered, butchered, and prepared for supermarkets.

Over the lunch hour, Daniel DeTurk, a graduate member of the chapter, and a student at Delaware Valley College, took the club on a tour of the Delaware Valley College Farms.

Next they visited the historical site of Valley Forge. The FFA members were allowed to view a slide show and then toured the historical sites by bus. They saw the headquarters of George Washington and the campsites of the soldiers.

From there, the club went to Ott's Greenhouse, which grows and sells many different types of plants, including tropical plants

Walebe Farm, a huge dairy operation, was the next stop Here, the members got a tour of the farm and saw some of the top production cows in the east They were informed that the animals were valued up to $200,000 per cow They also saw cows being milked on a carousel type milking parlor.

At last, the hungry group of Future Farmers enjoyed a delicious meal at the Collegeville Inn smorgasbord before returning home. The group extended a special note of appreciation to Brian Rabenold, chairman of the trip committee, for organizing the trip

N. Lebanon tops regional PPT

The Northern Lebanon FFA Parliamentary Procedure Team recently won the Eastern Regional Competition held at Kutztown State College.

The Northern Lebanon team topped the runnerup team from the Grassland FFA Chapter at Garden Spot High School, New Holland. Both teams will now compete in the state championships against six other teams at Penn State in June.

Penn State survey studies turnover of vo-ag teachers

UNIVERSITY PARK — Low salaries and heavy workloads account for an 11 percent turnover of vocational agriculture teachers in Pennsylvania, as indicated in a recent study at Penn State.

The survey shows a need to improve beginning salaries to attract and retain quality teachers in vocational agriculture.

"Vo-ag teachers must also be provided time throughout the school year and summer months to develop the high-caliber instruction required in quality programs for youth and adults," reported James D. Howe, teacher at Oley Valley High School, Berks County, who carried out the study as a master's degree thesis at Penn State.

Howe's analysis will be summarized in the upcoming spring issue of "Science in Agriculture," the quarterly magazine of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State Co-author and advisor for the project was Edgar P. Yoder, of the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education at University Park

The statewide survey showed that 27 percent of vo-ag teachers earn an annual salary of $18,000 to $21,000. Eighteen percent receive a salary of more than $21,000. The other 55 percent receive less than $18,000.

Howe noted that other studies indicate that salaries of public school teachers have not kept up with inflation And research elsewhere shows that pay for beginning vo-ag teachers is not on a par with salaries in business and industry.

"Better financial opportunities in business and industry appear to be one of the major reasons that high caliber beginning teachers leave the profession to pursue other careers," Yoder stated.

As for teaching load, there was concern that the total number of students is too large for an instructor to adequately carry out all the responsibilities Vo-ag teachers typically handle five classes daily, of 15 to 20 students per class. That's an average of 75 to 100 students in daytime classes.

"That's a heavy class load," Yoder said, "when vo-ag teachers must provide quality instruction in classes and laboratories, advise the FFA, supervise work-experience programs, and teach evening classes for adults."

In non-teaching duties, vo-ag faculty members carry out lunchroom duties and supervise detention hall and similar work. The study found 77 percent of vo-ag teachers involved in such assignments, with only 11 percent paid for such efforts. An average of 21 percent serve as advisors for clubs other than FFA.

The typical vo-ag teacher in Pennsylvania was shown to have 12 years of teaching experience. The majority, 67 percent, hold a bachelor's degree with 27 percent having a master's degree. The length of a teacher's contract ranges from 9 to 12 months

Franklin names poster contest winners

CHAMBERSBURG — The 1982 Poster Contest winners were announced recently by the Franklin County Conservation District. This year's theme was "What Water Conservation Means to Me."

Over 184 posters were received from Corpus Christi School, Chambersburg Area School District, Waynesboro Area School District, Fannett-Metal School District, and Tuscarora School District.

She finds satisfying career breeding Thoroughbreds

NEWARK, Del. — Joanne Szymanski never had to struggle over a career decision. She always loved horses The fascination began when she was a small child growing up in Stanton, Delaware and her father took her to see the races at nearby Delaware Park.

By age 13 Joanne was taking riding lessons At 16 she started spending her out-of-school hours working for trainers, learning how to groom horses and administer medications Studying animal science at the University of Delaware, she learned when and why each medication should be given. At the university, Joanne supplemented her practical experience with a thorough academic grounding in equine anatomy, physiology, and genetics.

During her college years, Joanne also worked parttime helping with the care and management of the university's horses Equine science professor C.M. Reitnour remembers Joanne as an excellent horsewoman.

After Joanne earned her degree in 1977, her parents traded their Stanton home for a Maryland farmstead Now the senior Szymanskis are enjoying a pleasant country retirement Their large screened porch overlooks about 50 well-manicured acres of pasture in the horse country around Cheasapeake City. Joanne's sister, Mary Ellen, has a lengthy commute each day to the Wilmington law office where she works. But Joanne's "office" is right outside the door She manages Loch Raven Farm

On a recent day at the height of breeding and foaling season there were 29 horses on the farm (as well as five dogs and six cats). Not all of the horses actually belonged to the Szymanskis. Some were permanent boarders, and others were sent just for the breeding season.

Breeding Thoroughbreds requires patience and skill — qualities which Joanne possesses in abundance, according to her former professor People bring their horses to Joanne when it's time for breeding and foaling because she's willing to spend virtually all her time watching and waiting for the moment her assistance might be required

To breed the mares, Joanne first introduces them to a "teaser" which is either a stallion or gelding whose job it is to let Joanne know when the mare is ready to be bred After the mare has been examined, Joanne takes her to visit the local stallion that Joanne has judged to be the mare's best genetic match Although Standardbred horses may be inseminated artificially, Thoroughbreds must be mated naturally, according to the rules of the Jockey Club.

The gelding Joanne is using as a teaser is a retired racehorse she bought Just before it was about to be sold to a pet food company Joanne nursed him back into shape on her horse treadmill, gradually increasing the speed and duration of the workouts as the horse became stronger Now he shows every sign of enjoying his second life, and Joanne is hopeful he may even race again

Breeding a mare requires patience, but waiting for her foal to drop requires even more. Starting two weeks before each mare's due date, Joanne makes a bed for herself in the barn and sleeps with one eye open in order to be ready to assist in the delivery if necessary Six mares have foaled at Szymanski's Lock Raven Farm this year, and four more are expected. One of the foals was born three weeks late Every so often Joanne takes a quick look at her own comfortable bedroom to remind herself what it's like.

Even with help from her family and a part-time assistant, Joanne is tied to the farm, but she doesn't view the situation as a hardship. She takes almost a parental interest in the horses, wondering what each foal will look like, then watching its birth and development

Getting up early every day, rain or shine, to feed, exercise, and clean up after 29 horses wouldn't suit everyone, but Joanne thrives on the life she has chosen On a rare four-day business trip to Kentucky to sell one of the yearlings, Joanne missed her charges after only two days And after selling that first yearling, she cried all the way home.

"The wonderful thing about horses," Joanne says, "is that they have no prejudice and no guile They don't care what you look like or the color of your skin You take care of them, and they reward you with love and trust"

Some day Joanne hopes to breed a champion racehorse Of course that would add to the prestige of Lock Raven Farm and contribute to the Szymanski's financial success. But it's very evident that Joanne isn't in the business for the money. It's a labor of love all the way.

Raising Thoroughbreds is a labor of love for University of Delaware graduate Joanne Szymanski. Joanne takes care of 29 horses on her Maryland farmstead.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

LIVING ALONE

More and more people are living alone Some authorities predict that by 1990 one out of every three households will be a single-person household. Many people will be "alone, together."

That means there will be more and more apartment complexes, travel clubs, community centers, churches and other places where singles will be welcome and will go to make friends.

It seems that right now we are on the leading edge of a movement that will change all of our lives

It is very much like the late 1950's when the forward looking demographers said, "In the future women will work 25, 35, even 45 years outside of the home." Not very many people believed this prediction Now they know that it has really happened.

In the same way, when experts predict that one out of every two people will live alone in the year 2000, who knows?

Living alone and liking it...it is an option more and more Americans are taking!

NATIONAL BARBECUE MONTH

May is National Barbecue Month, the time to move the kitchen outdoors and start a summer celebration of delicious eating. With the high cost of dining out these days, why not barbecue for inexpensive and relaxed at-home entertaining and family fun, whatever the reason or season.

If you already own a grill, now is the time to get it in shape and take careful inventory of supplies If you plan to purchase a new grill, consider such things as the number of people generally served, the types of food you like to grill, available outdoor space, storage, weather conditions and, of course, how much you can afford to spend.

Once you have established your needs, start shopping around. There is a tremendous selection of equipment and accessories available. Grills come in many sizes, styles and prices with features to suit the needs of the experienced backyard chefs and novices alike.

Start your barbecuing career with a simple brazier or habachi. Both are relatively inexpensive portable grills, great for small-scale cooking in a limited space. The more expensive grills offer the added conveniences of motor-driven rotisseries and skewers, storage drawers, utensil racks and cutting boards

SOME HOT TIPS

* A fire is ready for cooking when the coals are covered with grey ash - about 20 to 30 minutes after lighting

* Use tongs to turn meat. A fork punctures meat and lets those wonderful juices escape.

* Avoid flare-ups. Trim excess fat off meat and use a drip pan to catch drippings Have water handy to douse flames.

* NEVER, NEVER use gasoline or kerosene to start a fire!

* Clean-up is easier if you coat the grill top with vegetable cooking spray before barbecuing. Rub the outside of pots and pans with soap to save the finish and make cleanup easier.

* You can re-use briquets. Extinguish partially burned coals by closing dampers or dousing with water. Let dry and store in a meatl container. Never throw hot coals on the ground, even if they look dead

Penn State to sponsor Junior Livestock Field Day

UNIVERSITY PARK — A meats judging contest for 4-H and FFA members will be featured at the Junior Livestock Field Day scheduled for June 19 on The Penn State University's main campus.

"Registration for the field day, to be held at the Beef and Sheep Center near the Penn State football stadium, will start at 8.30 a.m.," says James P. Gallagher, Extension animal scientist and field day coordinator.

A session on meats judging — evaluation of the end product — will be conducted by James P. Watkins, assistant professor or animal science. This will be followed by a judging contest in which each contestant will evaluate two classes of beef, sheep and swine wholesale cuts plus retail meat cuts.

Following lunch, Dr. Erskine H. Cash, associate professor of animal science, and Matt Parsons, Extension livestock specialist, will discuss the criteria that should be used to select steers, lambs and feeder pigs for 4-H and FFA livestock projects.

Penn State specialists will demonstrate proper techniques used to exhibit animals.

The Junior Livestock Field Day is sponsored by the Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science

Joanne Barton wears York apple crown

RED LION — Joanne Barton, 19, was chosen 1982-83 York County Apple Queen at the annual banquet of the York County Fruit Growers Association, held at Rutter's Restaurant, here on May 7.

Joanne is the daughter of John and Norma Barton, of Barton's Fruit Farm and Greenhouses, Stewartstown.

The new Queen helps on the family farm in the preparation and sale of apples and other fruit. A 1981 graduate of Kennard-Dale High School, she is a sophomore at Millersville State College, majoring in elementary education with an interest in mathematics.

Richard Barton, president of the York County Fruit Growers Association, presented a gift from the Association to Joanne. Participants also heard Heather Staubach, York, describes her reign as 1981 Pennsylvania State Apple Queen

Joanne was crowned by Joyce Markey, 1981-82 York County Apple Queen. Joyce's parents, Ronald and Carolyn Markey of Ken-Mar Farms, received a special gift for their support of the Apple Queen program. Each of their 3 daughters, Sandy, Karen & Joyce has served as York County Apple Queen during the past 5 years. Sandy was Pennsylvania State Apple Queen during 1978.

Joanne will represent the York County Fruit Growers Association in civic meetings, mall promotions, and other gatherings. Her job as Apple Queen is to promote York County apples and to educate people as out the apple industry

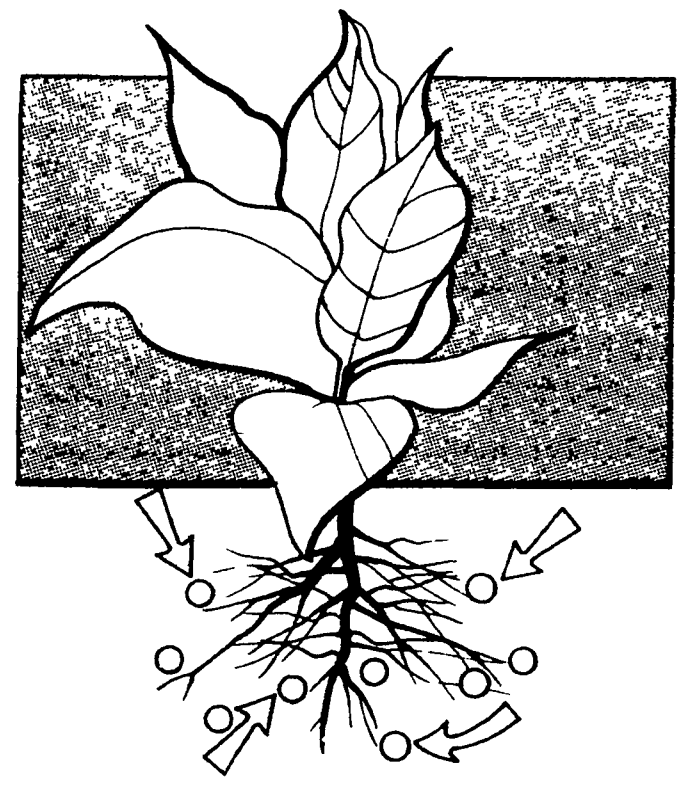
Ridomil® in the soil



For More Effective Control

Ridomil controls blue mold and black shank in your tobacco. But for Ridomil to do its best work, it should be applied to the soil before transplanting.

Ridomil destroys diseases present in the soil. Then it is absorbed by the roots and moved systemically throughout the plant to protect your tobacco as it grows.

For the best two-way action against blue mold and black shank, follow your label directions—use Ridomil in the soil.

Pack it right

LANCASTER — Decoration Day...Memorial Day – no matter what name you use, May 31 is the opening of picnic season. Do yourself and your family a favor; plan your picnic food for safety.

Don't make your family sick by serving food that has spoiled in hot weather say Extension nutrition specialists at Penn State. It's easy to forget about food safety when you're having fun

Picnics are leisurely affairs — you may decide on a game or a family walk before eating. So be sure to pack your food to keep it fresh for hours. Remember, the longer the time between kitchen and feast, the more important your precautions will be Here are some tips on keeping your silvan repast - otherwise known as a picnic - safe for family and friends.

—Choose foods that don't spoil easily. Sandwich spreads and salads mixed ahead of time spoil quickly in hot weather

—Have all foods cold or frozen when you leave the house The colder they are, the longer they'll stay safe — this is especially important for meat

—If you take food that will spoil easily, pack it in insulated containers with ice and have the food cold before you pack it

—Always park your picnic basket in the shade Never leave food in the car — temperatures can rise to nearly cooking levels in unshaded parking lots

—Only take what you can eat Perishable leftovers should be throw away – they could make you very sick

—Take basic ingredients and mix them up on the spot They'll taste fresher and be safer for you If you want egg salad, take hard-cooked eggs in their shells and open and mix them there The same goes for tuna or potato salad — leave them sealed in their jackets or cans until you're ready to eat

—Spreading out the food and getting it ready to eat is part of the fun on a picnic Make chopping, mixing, and preparing part of the ritual There's always a little extra time for it while the meat is cooking or the game is finishing So use those extra few minutes for safety

—One last word of advice when in doubt, throw it out Keep your friends and family free from spoiled food

Shepherd's Crook turns hobby into specialty shop for sheep breeders

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

MECHANICSBURG — Suzie Leib remembers being crazy about animals ever since she was old enough to walk.

Raised in Carroll County, Maryland, like many youngsters she begged and begged her parents for a pony. She finally got that pony and began taking riding lessons and working part-time for her instructor, who also had registered Dorset sheep.

Suzie bought her first lamb for $25 from her instructor, paying it off at $2 a week from her pay. A year later, with the support of her parents, she has twenty-seven sheep and over since that time her horses have had to take a backseat to the four-legged wool coats.

When Suzie married Bob Leib, a vocational agriculture instructor at Cumberland Valley High School, she gave up her maiden name, but not her sheep. Bob and Suzie kept the sheep and her breeder's prefix, Shepherd's Crook. The Leibs are taking what was once a hobby and are establishing a self-sufficient business. They raise 90 head of quality-bred Dorset and Hampshire sheep on their eleven-acre farm, plus a small supply dealership designed exclusively to meet the needs of sheep breeders and livestock showmen.

The Leibs started handling a variety of sheep supplies such as halters, medications, grooming products, and sheep skin covers because they said they saw a need for a such a business in their area.

Related Bob, "It's been my experience in the last ten years of teaching vocational agriculture that you have less kids on the farm. Sheep make a good project for kids with limited space. They don't require the capital investment of larger animals, they're smaller than cattle, and they're not objectionable to the neighbors The kids can get involved right away and they can get a double return through both the wool and the meat.

"Suzie and I are both very youth-oriented and want to help the kids in any way that we can. As more kids have gotten involved with sheep, they needed a place to come ask questions and to get the supplies they need. Since we own sheep, show, judge, and buy and sell, the supply shop seemed like a natural extension "

Bob, who was raised with beef cattle, finds sheep to be very much liked scaled-down cattle since they are both ruminant animals.

Chuckled Bob, "As I got older, I got smarter. The sheep don't kick, or step on your feet, and they're easy to handle."

Comparing their Dorsets and Hampshires, the Leibs admitted they prefer Dorsets because they have found them to be very feed-efficient.

"We like the Dorsets because they are out of season breeders and this allows us to breed for seasonal markets. The Dorsets are excellent milkers and we've had good success with our lambs It's not unusual for Dorsets to have three crops of lambs in two years," Suzie explained

Efficiency of production and quality in breeding are the cornerstone of the Shephard's Crook operation The Leibs participate in Penn State weight-gain studies and keep accurate records on their lambs, weighing them bi-weekly. In tune with keeping records, Bob stressed, "I feel the sheep industry needs to catch up with other agricultural industries in the areas of accurate weight-gain information. We need to do more testing and weighing."

The Leibs have realized a net income increase from both the sale of prime breeding stock and from on the farm lamb sales. They've seen an increase in the demand for their lambs as people become better acquainted with the true taste of lamb and further removed from the World War II tales about the meat from, "down under."

Suzie explained, "The secret to good tasting lamb is to cook it low and slow. If you cook it at a high heat, the fat will burn and flavor the meat. We always give a packet of recipes to anyone who purchases one of our lambs."

The Leibs expressed their personal pleasure on the number of repeat customers they have for both their breeding stock and their market lambs. As a result of the Leib livestock's quality reputation, their lambs command 5 cents to 10 cents a pound more than local slaughter prices.

"People are willing to pay a premium for young, well-fed, well-bred lambs. Plus, it's more economical for them to buy the whole lamb," said Bob.

The Leibs keep 90 head of Dorset and Hampshire sheep on their 11 acres quality-bred sheep sold to buyers in eight states. Shepherd's Crook is a family affair and their

Bob, Suzie, and Billy George Leib are all active in showing Dorset and Hampshire sheep — not only their own but other breeders'. Their sheep supply store grew out of a demand in their area for the products and information for new sheep owners. The farm, the sheep, and the store all carry the same distinctive name, Shepherd's Crook.

York 4-H'ers write way to 'chain' lambs

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Two York County 4-H'ers, Melissa Trostle and John Myers, won ewe lambs last Saturday for their essays telling why they wished to become a part of the sheep industry.

Not all woolies at the sheep field day were running through the sales ring. These stuffed cuties, busy with their knitting chores, caught the attention of numerous browsers at Joyce Kamka's display for The Fiber Connection.

The pair received their "ewe chain" lambs during the York Sheep and Wool Producers annual feed day, held at the York Fairgrounds. An estimated crowd of 1,200 to 1,500 turned out for the educational programs, market and breeding stock sale, and wool-related craft show.

Melissa is 15-years-old and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Trostle, R2 Red Lion. A 4-H'er for the past seven years, her prime project area has been in market and breeding hogs, and she owns 15 head of Spotted Poland Chinas.

In her essay, Melissa related that owning and raising sheep has always been one of her dreams, and she felt that she would learn a great deal from the project opportunity.

The purebred March-born Southdown lamb presented to Melissa was donated by the Preston Bankert family, R3 Red Lion.

Sixteen-year-old John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Myers, R1 Dallastown Known to his 4-H beef friends by the nickname "Charolais," John is a long-time beef club exhibitor, and owns a heifer and steer of the big, white beef breed

Red Lion Rotary Club purchased and donated his gift lamb, a purebred Dorset born in February, from the flock of George Dutrey,

Dallastown. In his essay, John wrote that he was interested in becoming active working with another species of livestock to broaden his knowledge of agriculture.

During the sale, John purchased two additional companion ewes for his chain lamb, and he was high junior in the judging competition.

Over a dozen youth submitted 200-word essays, expressing their reasons for wanting to win a lamb. One of the requirements that recipients must meet is the exhibiting of their lambs in York Fair open-class competition. Winners also are expected to have their lambs bred at the proper age, and return their first-born female for awarding to other chain recipients.

As 4-H members, both Melissa and John plan to use their lambs as club projects.

On hand to congratulate the winners was last year's recipient, Beverly Eisenhart, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Eisenhart, R2 Dover.

Her lamb, "Missy," is an Oxford from the flock of Greg Lau, Loganville, and will soon be returned temporarily to that farm for breeding purposes.

In her first year participating as a lamb exhibitor, Bev placed well in several York Fair events. She won a blue in the lead line class, placed third in fitting, and took a rosette in the breed class. Pleased with her initial venture in the sheep business, Bev was in the buyers' circle at the field day, with plans to purchase at least two additional lambs.

Over one hundred head of breeding stock and market lambs went through the sale, with auctioneer Blaine Rentzel at the gavel. Topping all three categories of breeding rams, ewes, and market lambs were purebred Suffolk consignments from J.T. Ranch, owned by the Jack Ness family, Dallastown.

Seven ram consignments averaged $66, while the 39 ewes brought an average of $85.60. Average of 47 market lambs came to $66.49. High selling fleece was from a purebred Oxford, sold by Greg and Martha Lau, Loganville.

Topping the junior division was ewe chain recipient John Myers, followed by David Shultz, Julie Myers, lamb-chain winner Melissa Trostle and John Hagerty.

Jean Hagerty capped the ladies division, over placers Sharon Raab, Beth Campbell, Maryanne Kern and Betty Barlage.

In the men's division, Terry Shearer took top points. Other high scorers in order were Joe Hagerty, Dave Holloway and Roger Bankert.

Included in the morning program session were a sheep dog herding demonstration and carcass cutting.

This year's field day saw an expanded sheep and wool-related craft show, drawing many hobbyists to the event. Exhibits ranged from spinning wool to finished products such as handcrafted sweaters and rugs, plus feed products and sheep-producing equipment.

In addition to numerous Pennsylvania buyers, the sale brought registrants from New York, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

BEST IN DESIGN, PRICE AND EXPERIENCE

Is your child safe on the farm?

UNIVERSITY PARK — Protecting children on farms is agriculture's single biggest problem. That's the essence of an article in the December 1981 "Professional Safety Magazine" written by Dennis Murphy, Extension safety specialist at Penn State University.

"Agriculture is the only major industry in which young people regularly work in hazardous environments and operate dangerous equipment. Operating a farm tractor is one example. In no other industry is a 10-year old allowed near a worksite, let alone allowed to ride or operate equipment," Murphy says in the article.

The possibilities for play on the farm are limited only by a child's imagination and initiative. The entire farm and its surroundings are a child's playground Idle machinery and bales of hay can become space ships or mountains to climb.

But work is another thing, it can be dangerous. The working experience farm children get is useful, but it's taking its toll in young lives. Too often adults feel that simply telling children how to do something and then watching them for a few minutes is adequate instruction. In fact, many children are quite capable of operating machinery under favorable conditions and at slow speeds. But many young children do not have the strength, coordination, or judgement to operate machinery in difficult situations or at high speeds.

Accident statistics are stark reminders of childrens' vulnerability. In a recent study of tractor accidents in Michigan and Ohio, the 10 to 14 year olds had 10 times more accidents than the 22 to 44 year old group!

Insuring tractor safety is partially a design problem. Tractors are designed for single operators so children cannot be properly supervised while they learn, until a second seat is securely added.

But you can help. The other part of the problem can be solved by being aware of the dangers of large and powerful equipment. Our children's safety is at stake.

Western U.S. water outlook good

WASHINGTON, D C — Water supplies should be good to excellent for much of the West this summer, according to the season's final coordinated report issued last week by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Commerce.

Peter C. Myers, chief of USDA's Soil Conservation Service, said streamflow is forecast to equal or exceed normal in almost all areas in the West.

Surveys carried out the first of May revealed generally good mountain snowpack conditions at high elevations. Must rivers have yet to reach their spring peaks.

Many reservoirs will be filled during the runoff, and almost the entire region will have ample stored water to supplement late season streamflow, Myers said.

Arizona Snowpack has melted and rivers are receding to summer levels. Reservoirs are fuller than normal and water supplies should be adequate.

Colorado: Snowpack statewide is 123 percent of normal ranging from near normal on the South Platte to 143 percent on the Yampa.

Montana: A snow-deficient area in south central Montana will result in a small area of below runoff. Elsewhere, streamflow should be normal or above.

Nevada: Record heavy snows in early April greatly increased the snowpack. Runoff will be much above normal in all areas

New Mexico: Heavy snowpack remains on the Rio Chama headwaters. Late season water should be excellent along the Rio Grande and Rio Chama.

Oregon: Stream flow will exceed normal in most areas. Reservoirs are currently about 80 percent of capacity, and are expected to fill during the spring runoff.

Utah. Snowpack is depleted in the south, but is still heavy in the north. Reservoir storage is average. Water supplies should be excellent.

Washington. Snowpack is above normal, and runoff is expected to be normal to above normal Most reservoirs will fill during the snowmelt season

Wyoming: Snowpack and runoff conditions vary widely across the state. Below normal streamflow is forecast for the Black Hills and Laramie Range. Above normal runoff is forecast in western Wyoming, and near normal elsewhere. Summer rainfall does not normally have a major effect on these forecasters, since about 75 percent of the region's water comes from melting snow, Myers said.

The Soil Conservation Service surveys snowpack and monitors snowmelt at 1,600 sites and forecasts streamflow at nearly 500 locations throughout the West each month from January through May

USDA specialists, in cooperation with the National Weather Service of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, U.S Department of Commerce, anaylze the date and issue monthly forecasts of runoff and water supplies

Follow the rules for safe home canning

NEWARK, De. — If home canning is a part of your summer schedule, don't forget about food safety. Unless you can your foods properly, they may be dangerous to eat, reminds Delaware Extension home economist Claudia Holden. Following recommended canning procedures will keep molds, yeasts, bacteria, and other organisms from spoiling your home canned foods.

All foods can be grouped into two types, says the home economist; high-acid and low-acid Don't use canning methods recommended for one type when preparing the other.

High-acid foods include fruits, tomatoes, sauerkraut, pickles, relishes, jams, preserves, and fruit juices These may be safely processed by immersing the sealed jars in boiling water in a water bath canner for the recommended time. Processing time varies with the content, pack, and size of container, so be sure to follow instructions carefully.

Low-acid foods include all common vegetables (except tomatoes), pickled vegetables, meats, poultry, seafoods, and mixed canned products that contain part low-acid, such as corn with tomatoes. Because these foods do not naturally contain enough acid to protect them against harmful bacteria, they must be processed, or superheated to 240 degrees F in a pressure canner, to destroy bacteria and produce a safe end product.

Low-acid foods should not be processed in a hot water bath, Holden emphasizes. There is no way to be sure that all the deadly clostridium botulinum spores in low-acid foods will be destroyed by boiling, even for long periods.

Use jars and lids recommended and manufactured specifically for home canning, says the home economist. They are designed to give the correct seal and are strong enough to withstand the pressures and temperatures used in home canning.

Use canning recipes that have been scientifically developed, and follow them to the letter

Finally, check your canning equipment now, Holden suggests. If you have a pressure canner, make sure it is in good condition. Replace worn or inaccurate parts before the canner is used

Air-tight storage with more versatility than any other system. Just look at these AG-BAG ADVANTAGES

1 UNLIMITED "Air-tight, oxygen-free" storage
2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3 Transportable
4 Easy to use and little maintenance
5 NO dangerous silo gases
6 Silo fires WON'T occur
7 Higher moisture forage
8 NO unloader to break down
10 THE Forage System for the 80's

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG ' At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year The bags are a good thing "

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made" says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale Oregon

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long I used to clean my bunks after three days now I only need to clean them after 10 days "

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair Nebraska and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs to finish

By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration I feed alfalfa silage corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements

The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain '

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

At least 30% more feed I can guarantee at least that says rancher, Bert Anderson of Sceptre Saskatchewan

I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging It s just like feeding grass I ve also eliminated the need for a l quid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System

HERE'S WHAT THE AG-BAG SYSTEM CAN DO FOR YOU

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Crop yield estimates are often poorly made. Many farmers automatically reply 100 bushels per acre to the question "How much corn do you harvest?"

Our 5-acre corn and alfalfa clubs unfortunately add to this erroneous yield reporting by making it into a contest. Who wants to get beat in a contest? Result—only the very best parts of the best fields are entered and losses are held to a minimum.

Another problem with crop yield estimates is the unknown loss due to harvesting, handling, and feeding. Hay can have a loss of over 35 percent from the amount standing in the field to the amount fed to the cows. Add to that another 5 to 10 percent loss due to slobber, spoilage, or tromped on hay. It's no wonder that many dairy producers have enough hay acres but run out of hay.

Corn, especially ear corn, is another big loser. Just walk through a corn field after it has been harvested. Look at all of those yellow kernels all over the ground plus the ears lying around. A 20 percent loss is not unusual with ear corn, especially once the kernel moisture drops below 22 percent. Oats are not immune to loss, although it is harder to see the little kernels on the ground.

Centre crop records

Hopefully in the next few years we are going to get a better idea of crop yields under actual farm conditions for an entire crop. These yields will be for good and poor stands.

We also hope to get a little more accurate data on some of the costs involved in producing these crops. It will require that farmers, Extension people, and the Centre County Crop Improvement Association technician spend some time and make an effort to record pertinent data. The end result could be quite valuable to those who are participating.

What To Grow?

The answer of what to grow depends on your use of the crop.

If it is for dairy feed, satisfy forage (hay, haylage, corn silage) needs first. You will need about 5 to 5.5 tons of hay equivalent for each cow plus about 3 tons of hay equivalent per cow for replacement heifers.

"That's the amount of material you need after it is put in front of the cow. Get a "Silage and Silos" circular from your county agent to see how much you have to have in the field to wind up with this amount of net forage.

After forage needs, corn will probably give you the best return for your dollar input, if you can get a net yield in excess of 80 bushels. For those of you fortunate enough to be able to grow 35 bushels of soybeans per acre or better, beans may well be third. Handling may become a daily chore in warm weather though.

Barley always looks like an economical crop on paper, but yield uncertainties make it hard to build a long-range feeding program. Wheat is good if it is fed on a limited basis and straw yields can be quite high (it can be used or sold as a cash crop).

Oats make a palatable feed but actual nutrient yields in much of the state make them uneconomical. It takes an actual net yield of 90 to 100 bushels per acre to make them come into the picture. An exception would be oats grown on land requiring a lot of time by an operation that has surplus crop acres and a severe cash flow problem.

Bradford forest landowners meet

TOWANDA — A large number of Bradford County forest landowners met recently at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Karn near Herrickville who, since 1960, have planted over 150,000 trees including of ponderosa pine, of European, Asian, and American hazelnut trees.

The Karn's are members of the American Tree Farm system and have received awards for their excellence from the Pennsylvania Forestry Association and were Regional Winners receiving recognition from the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts.

Jim Lacek of the Bureau of Forestry, and Jim Finley of the Penn State Extension Service explained disease problems, pruning, thinning, damage by insects and other natural causes, and soil preference of trees.

SIDE DRESS "N" YES, WE CAN

WHY —

1 - Corn populations are heavy. Every seed germinated and emerged
2 - Some of you may have "Short Changed" the pre-plant nitrogen rates
3 - In dry seasons adequate fertility is even more important
4 - Penn State says, Do It

HOW —

1 - Liquid nitrogen custom applied between the rows with a 3-point mounted applicator with drop nozzles

NU-PULSE MILKING SYSTEMS

Scott Shedden, Canton, PA, says:

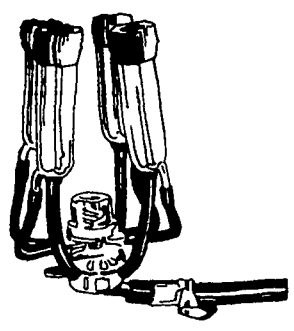
"NU-PULSE BEATS THEM ALL"

"When I first heard of the Nu-Pulse milker, it sounded simple, yet it seemed like something that would do a good job.

With our 52 cows, our herd average has been 17,000M and 626F. Teats and udders have been softer. Since using Nu-Pulse, milkers falling off has not been a problem. These milkers have definitely surpassed what we were told they would do

We installed these Nu-Pulse milkers in October 1980 and they continued to prove to me that something doesn't have to be complicated to be the best. As far as I'm concerned Nu-Pulse milkers beat them all and they're simple.

There is no competition for Nu-Pulse because Nu-Pulse makes all others obsolete."



Installed by STEINER'S REF., Canton, Pa.

Pa. farmers find field work flourishing

HARRISBURG — It was another excellent week for farm field activities as all three regions of the state reported six days suitable for fieldwork pushing most activities ahead of last year's levels, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Field activities included plowing; spraying; making haylage, harvesting rye for silage and green chop; harvesting asparagus; and planting oats, corn, potatoes and soybeans.

Although dry weather conditions have enabled field activities to progress rapidly, crops are on the verge of showing moisture stress. Statewide, surface soil moisture was rated mostly short to adequate.

At 88 percent complete, plowing is slightly ahead of last year at this time when it was 85 percent complete. Plowing is 88 percent complete in the northern region, 87 percent in the central region, and 89 percent complete in the southern region.

Virtually all peaches in the state are in full bloom or past, 92 percent of cherries are in full bloom or past, and 84 percent of apples are in full bloom or past. Reporters indicated that there was a heavy set of most apples, but winter injury in some peach trees is now starting to show up. Strawberries are developing well, but rain is needed.

Statewide, virtually all oats are planted compared with 91 percent sown at this time last year. Emergence and growth of oats are taking place rather slowly due to lack of moisture.

At 82 percent complete, planting of potatoes is way ahead of last year at this time when 65 percent was planted. The northern region reported 60 percent planted, the central region reported 79 percent planted, while potato planting was virtually complete in the southern region.

Statewide, 22 percent of the soybean crop is planted compared with 15 percent last year. In the northern region five percent is planted, in the central region 17 percent is planted, and in the southern region 65 percent is planted.

The corn crop in the Commonwealth is 55 percent planted compared with 45 percent last year. In the northern region 46 percent is planted, in the central region 50 percent is planted, and the southern region 67 percent is planted. Reporters have indicated that germination has been slow due to lack of moisture.

Statewide, 27 percent of the barley crop is in boot and 32 percent is headed compared with 36 percent in boot and 16 percent headed last year. In the north 36 percent is in boot and 30 percent is headed. In the central region 25 percent is in boot and 13 percent is headed, while in the southern region 24 percent is in boot and 48 percent is headed.

Wheat is 24 percent in boot and six percent headed compared with 30 percent in boot and less than five percent headed at this time last year. In the north 24 percent is in boot, in the central region nine percent is in boot, and in the south 37 percent is in boot.

Both alfalfa and clover-timothy stands were rated mostly fair to good, but if they do not receive moisture soon, conditions will worsen. The amount of feed obtained from pasture was rated below average by 48 percent of PDA reporters, average by 48 percent, and above average by four percent.

Farming's Futures

By David K. Sauder
Commodity Advisor
Trade Tech, Lancaster

In a recent USDA survey, ninety-three percent of the farmers said they should know more about futures trading Futures markets can provide key benefits to farmers even if they never trade a single contract.

Only a few farmers trade futures but many use the price information generated by futures markets in making production and marketing decisions A good many go further, using forward contracts and other marketing opportunities that are made possible by futures markets

While this is true, hedging can be a valuable marketing tool for many farmers For crop farmers, hedging usually involves selling futures contracts to offset their price risk in owning or producing the actual commodity

Hedging can help protect against a big loss which the farmer can't afford.

Futures contracts can also help farmers obtain loans for operating capital when their security for the loan is anticipated production Many banks and Production Credit Associations make loans based primarily on the value of that production—protected by a hedge in futures.

No Guarantee of Profits

Despite the potential value of hedging, it's no routine, mechanical process Economic studies indicate that automatic" hedging—for example, selling futures equal to half your corn crop at planting time every year—is no better guarantee of profits than automatically selling your corn at harvest every year

Experienced hedgers do it selectively Basically, that means if you are a crop farmer you would hedge when the price of your commodity is more likely to go down than up If you are a livestock feeder, you would hedge when the price of feedstuffs is more likely to go up

The key is to hedge at the right moment—before the markets move in the wrong direction It takes intensive study and up-to-the-minute market information to do it successfully

Several years ago, USDA crop reporting questionnaires asked farmers about their use of futures trading Less than 7 percent said they had actually traded futures contracts in recent years And about half of those who did trade were evidently speculating rather than hedging

A Question of Trust

* Many consider their operations too small to need or effectively use a futures market hedge
* Many want to hang onto their profit opportunities, and a hedge can limit profits from price increased in the same way that it helps protect against losses from price declines
* Many prefer other kinds of forward contracts or cash marketing arrangements
* Some dislike the idea of margin calls—when the price in the futures market moves against them, and they have to put up more cash to maintain their margin (usually 5 percent of the current value of their contract) They probably dislike them especially because the margin calls come when they are also losing out on favorable cash market developments
* Many farmers may fear they don't know enough about the markets to use them effectively, and their marketing needs don't justify the intensive management resources that futures trading would demand
* Some simply do not trust the futures markets

What use, then"

Hedging in futures takes intensive management effort, therefore futures trading is not for everyone Next week we'll take a look at who should use the futures market

Send your questions about futures trading to Farming's Futures, Lancaster Farming Newspaper, Box 366, Lititz, PA 17543.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Over-zealous undoing

America's farmers are facing a basic economic truth as they rush to plant this year's crops — that farm prices are determined by supply and demand So the more they plant this spring and the more they harvest next fall, the worse they do financially.

It's a fact of farming that a little too much of something makes a big difference in its price. And since we already have an ample supply of several farm commodities, including corn, soybeans and wheat, bumper crops are going to cause even lower prices and severe farm losses

The economic experts say a five percent oversupply will cut prices 10 to 20 percent and affect profits even more drastically And on the other side of the coin, a short crop can actually result in improved farm income.

While this seems contrary to logic, it is a fact It would seem that if you have more of something to sell, it would yield more money As an individual farmer and for a given price per bushel this might be true, but when all farmers start selling wheat, or corn, or soybeans, the total supply has to be considered.

Here's where a very important economic law comes into play. The law of diminishing demand says that if a great quantity of something is thrown on the market, it can be sold only at a lower price How much the price must be lowered varies with the commodity.

For most farm goods, a sizable price drop is necessary to move just a little more. But for sports cars, or some other luxury items, a small price cut could drastically increase sales and the added volume could more than make up for the cut

When you stop to think about it, this relationship is fairly easy to see Consumers can use only so much wheat reardless of the price In a normal year, they're getting about all the wheat they want Then when an extra five percent comes along the price on all wheat drops, just to market that little bit extra.

On the other end of the scale is a situation where if the crop is short the price will rise considerably. Consumers need bread and they re willing to pay for it

Most agricultural goods are like wheat If the supply is a little short, the price jumps a lot And if the supply is long, the price drops The size of the price change in response to the supply is the key In the case of wheat or corn or soybeans, this shift can be great enough to cause a higher total income from a less-than-normal crop — or seriously depressed prices from a small oversupply

In past years, an unfavorable growing season has been a blessing in disguise The short crop boosts prices, price times supply yields total income A farmer who sells 10,000 bushels of corn for even $3 a bushel, is better off than one who sells 12,000 bushels for $2 — assuming production costs are the same in both cases

The trick in this economic hocus-pocus is to make the situation work for farmers each year instead of against them Various organizations have tried to control farm output by pouring milk on the ground, burning crops, burying baby pigs, and so on For the most part, these farm level control programs have not worked You see, agriculture is perhaps the last vestage of pure competition Anyone who wants to farm and who can get some land, machinery and supplies, can go into business And whatever is produced will be sold at some price

Alone, this farmer has virtually nothing to say about price and no effect on the market He can't raise the price by holding his crop nor is he denied a market at some price when he's ready to sell

Pure competition can be a very difficult game — each farmer doing his very best to grow and sell as much as he can By definition, he hopes for a bumper crop for himself and the plague for all other growers

Sometimes his over-zealous productivity is his own undoing For collectively, these millions of farmers make up the total supply picture This in turn sets the price If total output is greater than demand, the individual suffers That could easily be the case for this marketing year

NAILE expects record sheep entries

New research program comes to Eastern Shore

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The University of Maryland has announced it will establish a new research pilot program on Maryland's Eastern Shore that officials say will offer a modern "systems" approach to agricultural research

The program, named "The Center for Advanced Agricultural Concepts" was unveiled to state legislators from the Eastern Shore and agricultural leaders this month at the Wye Research and Education Center near Queenstown, the 900-acre site designated for the new experimental program

The new Center concept will provide an environment for a number of academic and research disciplines to work together as teams on specific agricultural problems, according to W Lamar Harris, the director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station

John S. Toll, left, president of the University of Maryland, and Jack Kimberly, head of local development for the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies, both pledged their support to a coordinated "systems approach" to agricultural research at the recently unveiled Center for Advanced Agricultural Concepts near Queenstown, Md.

"Historically, our field research units have been managed with a high degree of independence by one or more academic departments at the College Park and Eastern Shore campuses," Harris told legislators

At the new Center, however, we are applying a systems management approach, putting together at a single site a coordinated research program involving teams of scientists who will look for solutions to problems and keys to development opportunities," he said

Harris said the new Center concept is not designed to "advocate the demise of agricultural research specialists

"We believe many of the increasingly complex requirements of today's agricultural enterprise can best be resolved by a coordinated research program involving individual scientists working on fundamental problems within academic disciplines and teams of researchers seeking solutions to broader problems," he said.

We are convinced that this method will not only make more efficient use of personnel, financial and physical resources, but provide new technology that will be adopted quickly by farmers."

Teams of scientists are expected to work in six basic areas of research at the Center, according to Harris

They are * integrated pest management; * cattle breeding and genetics, * plant breeding and genetics, * energy development, use and conservation, * quality of life studies, and * interaction of land and water.

In addition to those six study areas, Harris said the new Center will establish a "broad base of technology transfer" — under the leadership of the Cooperative Extension Service — using faculty resources of the University of Maryland and resources provided by the Wye Institute and Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies to increase the pace of moving research discoveries to their practical application for agriculture

"In the past," Harris explained, "some farmers were more alert to research developments than others and quickly incorporated research findings into their farming systems"

Utilizing a number of organizations — such as MCES, Aspen and Wye Institutes — to transfer research information quickly should narrow that information gap, according to Harris

In parallel announcements officials for the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies said they will present plans for an annual international conference on "food, fuel, fiber and climate" to be held at the new Center

"We expect the University of Maryland will play an important role in the planning, programming and presentation of these topics," said Jack Kimberly, head of Aspen Institute's local development committee.

In addition, he said, the Institute plans to establish a permanent Office of Agricultural Affairs at the Center "to link the Center with other Aspen Institute agricultural activities throughout the country"

The Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies is a worldwide organization with its East Coast office located adjacent to the new Center Its members are scholars, political figures and businesspeople from throughout the country

MAES officials say new equipment and facilities for the Center will include a weather data station, computer installations and such sophisticated devices as a mobile lab to measure gaseous components of air

Heifer Project sends animals to Belize

NEW WINDSOR, Md. — On April 22, a shipment of animals was sent by Heifer Project from Miami International Airport to the newly independent nation of Belize in Central America. Included in the shipment were 23 pigs, 7 goats, 6 sheep, and 6 rabbits

The animals were destined for several different projects in Belize. The pigs will become part of a central breeding herd operated jointly by Heifer Project and the Belize Agricultural Department Offspring are distributed from this herd to farmers around the country who are starting to raise pigs, or who are already raising pigs and want to improve the quality of their animals The improved growth realized from these pigs, or from a crossbreeding program using these pigs, will provide a significant increase in the amount of meat available even if the same number of animals are raised as previously

The goats, sheep and rabbits are destined to be part of the 4-H program in Belize. Most of these animals will be held at the National 4-H Center, established by Heifer Project in cooperation with the Government of Belize

Boys and girls come to this center for a three month training course in the care of animals, and upon completion of their training are provided with foundation stock needed to start raising these animals at home Each young person can choose from the rabbits, goats, sheep and poultry being raised at the 4-H Center All of these animals sent in this shipment were males, with the intention of maintaining a good quality herd of these various species at the 4-H Center, and for crossbreeding with local animals

This shipment was made possible because of donations from many churches and individuals in this area The animals themselves were purchased or donated from farms in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New England

For further information on this program, or on other projects of Heifer Project International, contact the regional office at P O Box 188, New Windsor, Md 21776

Wayne Co. slates youth conservation camp

HONESDALE — The 1982 Wayne County Conservation Camp is scheduled for July 18 - 24, at Lacawac Sanctuary (near Lake Wallenpaupack)

This camp is a "hands-on" program designed to teach young people about wildlife, ecology, aquatics, forestry, conservation, farm practices and other related studies Students will also learn about stream improvement, water quality, land use and best of all - awareness. Students will acquire an understanding and respect for the environment and will hopefully teach others to do the same.

The cost of this week-long camp is $100 00. Each camper will pay $25 00, the balance of the fee, $75.00, will be paid by a sponsoring organization. These organizations include Wayne County Extension Service, Lacawac Sanctuary, Wayne County Sportsmen's Association, Wayne-Pike Audubon, Honesdale Women's Club, Wayne Conservation District and Soil Conservation Service

Any boy or girl between the ages of 13 and 15 with an interest in participating in this camp is encouraged to contact the Wayne County Extension Service at 253-5970, extension 114, or the Lacawac Sanctuary at 689-9494

It s the extra margin of quality URAN has over other nitrogen solutions Features like low free ammonia and a near neutral pH They assure a better feed & weed application Better compatibility with most herbicides And often better herbicide performance - especially under dry weather conditions

A URAN feed & weed application gets two important jobs done in one money saving trip It not only saves time fuel manpower and equipment but means one less soil compacting trip over your field

URAN has no pressure or volatile ammonia to worry about It can be sprayed dribbled flown on soil or crop residues injected subsurface or applied through irrigation water And it gives you both fast-acting and long lasting nitrogen response

Don t accept imitations See us for the real thing genuine Golden URAN

USDA approves Alaska as grain inspection agent

WASHINGTON, D C. — On June 1, Alaska's Department of Natural Resources will begin to perform official grain inspection services within the state, except for export locations

The U.S. Department of Agriculture had been providing official inspection services in Alaska for the past two years on an interim basis until a qualified applicant could be selected, according to J.T Abshier, director of the compliance division for USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service

This is the first time Alaska has provided grain inspection The designation is for a three-year term.

MILK GENERATOR T.M.

We are proud to offer local dairymen the benefits from feeding Purina Milk Generator complete milking rations with the new TNI rating system, formulated to produce:

1. High milk production.
2. Maintain milk persistency at a higher level.
3. A shorter calving interval.
4. Good health, with fewer metabolic disorders.
5. The End Result: More milk in the lifetime of your cows.

Purina® Milk Generator™ 1058 BF is a unique new product. It includes a combination of butterfat enhancers to bring depressed butterfat back up to acceptable levels. This ration also has a balance of high energy, proteins, minerals and vitamins for high production levels.

Milk Generator 1058 BF is part of Purina's new Milk Generator line, the line of complete milking rations that helps you make the most milk for the money.

Purina Milk Generator 1000 and 1056 will improve the long-term quality and production of your herd. And with Purina Milk Generator, you'll be makin' the most milk for the money.

With Milk Generator 1000, you know that your cows will be strong, healthy, good producers. And they'll stay in your herd longer.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY!

We offer a complete line of Purina Milk Generator rations. Come in or call today and let us help you select the Milk Generator ration that best fits your herd, your roughages and production goals.

Weight Lifter™ puts the amino acids in balance.
Wayne™ Weight Lifter™ feeds are different from ordinary protein formulations. They balance the amino acid requirements precisely. So your pigs get the right amount required to grow into strong, efficient hogs.

And reduced amino acid excess means no costly protein wastes. Just 15% protein savings.

Research and field tests show Weight Lifter improves hogs' efficiency, resulting in 7.4% better feed conversion and 9.1% increase in average daily gain. That means hogs shoud be ready for market 10 days sooner on 32 pounds less feed.

Weight Lifter fits your feeding system.
Use Weight Lifter for your breeding stock, weaned pigs and finishing hogs. It's the convenient feeding program that reduces your feed inventory and labor.

Get on the Weight Lifter Program. It's proven to increase hogs' efficiency and reduce protein costs.

Only your Wayne dealer has it.

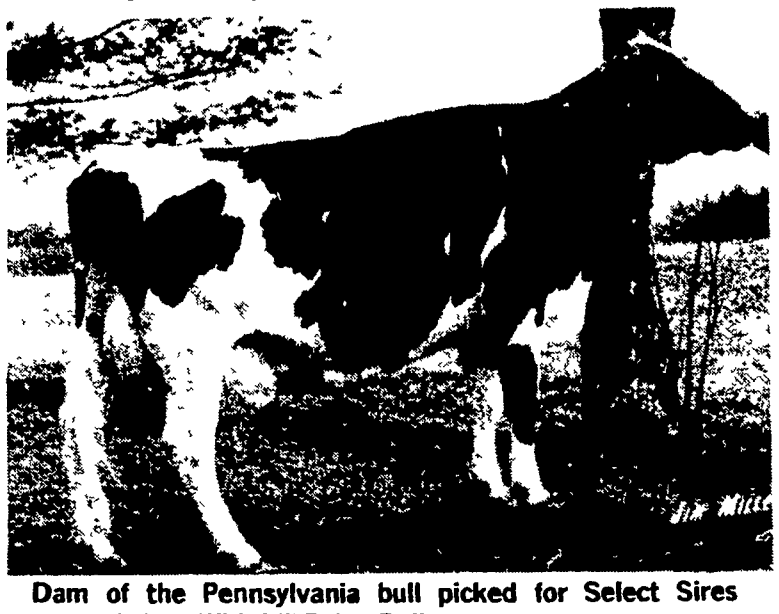
Pa. bull begins Select Sires test

PLAIN CITY, OH. — Pen-Col Dependence-ET, a young bull bred by Pen-Col Farms, Millville, has been chosen to enter Select Sires' Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) sire sampling system.

Based on this outstanding pedigree, this bull calf has been selected as one of the only 120 Holstein bulls from throughout the U.S. to enter the program in 1982.

This young son of the popular Straight-Pine Elevation Pete comes from an outstanding transmitting cow family. His dam is Inka Whirlhill Pabst Della an Excellent (90-3E) (EX-MS) Gold Medal daughter of Whirlhill Kingpin. She has six records over 26,000 lbs. of milk and 900 lbs. of fat with a cow index of +1,768M +$225. She already has a high PDM son and three outstanding daughters for milk and type.

Select Sires, a family of 11 farmer-owned and controlled artificial insemination (A.I.) co-ops, is the nation's largest A.I. cooperative. The basic objective of this federation is to serve the genetic needs of livestock farmers.



Dam of the Pennsylvania bull picked for Select Sires program is Inka Whirlhill Pabst Della.

Study explores merit of non-iodine teat dip

ST. PAUL, MINN — A recent university study shows a non-iodine based teat dip to be twice as effective as an iodine based dip in preventing coliform mastitis.

Results of the study show an infection rate of only 16 percent in cows treated with the non-iodine teat dip compared to a 35 percent infection rate in the cows treated with the iodine product. The study was conducted by Richard Bennett, Dairy Extension Advisor, University of California.

The use of effective teat dips is commonly endorsed for Strep. and Staph mastitis control Until now, researchers have generally agreed that commercially available teat dips did not significantly prevent coliform and other gram negative bacteria mastitis. This study, however, demonstrates the ability of a teat dip to actually reduce the number of cases of coliform mastitis significantly below levels experienced with a leading brand name iodine dip.

Bennett used a California dairy herd of 320 cows for the two year study. Half of the herd was treated with Blu-Gard, a non-iodine dip containing linear dodecylbenzene sulfonate as the active anti-microbial agent The remaining aniamls were treated with an iodophor teat dip

Both groups of cows were dipped with the respective product within one minute after the milking machine was removed. Other herd management practices were the same for both groups.

To minimize the risk of coliform mastitis, preventive measures included: eliminating udder pre-washers; treating udder wash water with an iodophor sanitizer; using single service paper towels to completely dry the udder prior to milking; and using specially designed free stalls.

Udder health was closely monitored and clinical mastitis cases were recorded. Individual milk somatic cell counts were done monthly, individual mammary quarter samples were collected for bacterial culture, and teat end condition was scored using a numerical system.

Results of the test show that the Blu-Gard dipped cows experienced significantly fewer cases of mastitis and the teat end condition was better than the group dipped with the iodine product.

According to Bennett's study, the reduction of clinical mastitis in the Blu-Gard group clearly indicates that Blu-Gard provides protection against coliform mastitis that iodine products do not.

Dairymen Inc. promotes Hall

BALTIMORE, MD — The Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc is pleased to announce the appointment of John Leland Hall to Director of Laboratory Services upon the retirement of Robert E. Stout

Hall is a 1975 graduate of Clemson University where he majored in dairy science. After graduation he went to work for Pet, Inc. Dairy Group as Quality Control Manager of their St Petersburg, Florida plant. He joined the Dairymen, Inc. organization in 1976 as Quality Control Supervisor of the Nashville Division and went on to become Quality Control Supervisor of the Kyana Division-London District in 1978 He came to the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen in March, and will assume the position of Director of Laboratory Services on June 1.

Hall has been a member of the Kentucky Association of Milk, Food and Environmental Sanitarians His wife, Barbara Thompson Hall, is a secondary school teacher.

Equipment features dual spreading

New liquid manure spreading equipment from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania requires only the flip of a lever to change from open spread to injection application. The injection chisels pull from the axle for added strength. The injection unit is easily removed by detaching several bolts at the axle and quick-releasing several link chains at the back of the spreader. More information is available from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, 3053 Barren Road, Oxford, Pa. 19363.

Aids composting

ALLENTOWN — Thermobac can compost most forms of solid organic wastes such as animal and poultry droppings, domestic garbage, dead vegetation, and similar types of refuse from homes, feedlots, and stockyards.

Chore-Time offers new 36-inch poultry panel fan

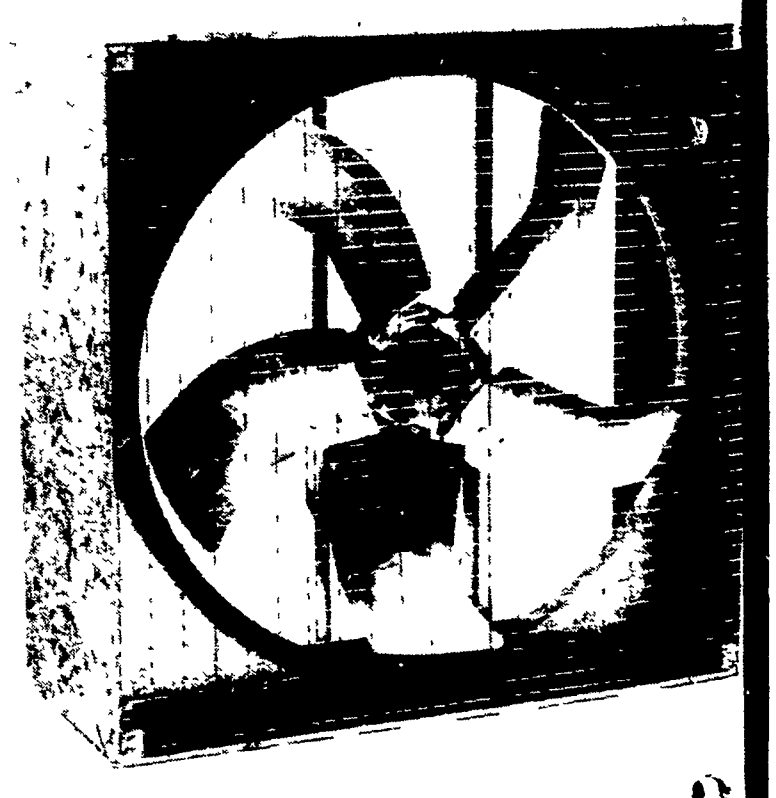
MILFORD, Ind. — Chore-Time Equipment, Milford, Ind., had introduced a new 36-inch diameter Panel Fan for economical air movement in poultry houses.

Available in either a sturdy waferboard wood framework, or as a wall-mount model, Chore-Time's new Panel Fan features unique compound curve fan blades designed for maximum efficiency and lower operating costs. Fan comes with protective screens for guarded operation.

"Chore-Time's 36-inch Panel Fan is definitely an all-purpose unit," says Bob Krevinghaus, Chore-Time's Air Systems Product Manager. "Because this fan is an economical, energy-efficient 'air pump', it is ideal for use in most broiler houses. It can be used as a sidewall exhaust fan, or for air circulation within the building."

Other features of the newest Chore-Time fan include self-aligning bearings pre-lubricated with ammonia-resistant grease for long life; one-piece, all-galvanized frame and fan opening; and durable fan motor suspended by self-tensioning belt to minimize belt slippage and maintenance.

Chore-Time manufactures complete ventilation systems and other automated equipment for the care and feeding of poultry and livestock, with world-wide distribution from its plants in Milford and Goshen, Indiana; Modesto, California; Athens, Georgia; Decatur, Alabama; and Maldegem, Belgium.



Ideal for use in most broiler houses, Chore-Time Equipment's new 36-inch diameter Panel Fan features unique compound curve fan blades designed for maximum efficiency and lower operating costs.

Growing point holds the Key to survival of corn plant

DEKALB, Il. — Every corn kernel you put into the ground contains a miniature undeveloped plant, according to Wayne Fowler, Agronomic Education Director, DeKalb AgResearch, Inc.

It has the amazing ability of almost exploding into a fully mature plant that will produce one-half to three-fourths pounds of grain in its four-to-five month life span. Until tasseling is completed, survival of the plant's growing point is crucial to future plant growth and development

The growing point is an organized mass of cells at the tip of the stem. It contains, in rudimentary form, the rest of the leaves that will eventually develop, the tassel, and even the tiny ear. Some of these future plant parts are represented by only a few cells when plants are less than knee high. It's a good idea to split some healthy young corn plants with a sharp knife so you can spot the growing point, which appears as a Christmas tree-shaped structure, glistening white or cream-colored, sometimes with tinges of green.

Until corn seedlings are about 10 inches tall, their growing points will be below the soil surface. As plants grow beyond 12 inches in height, their growing points will be found further and further above ground level. When plants reach maximum height, what used to be the tip of the growing point becomes the tassel.

Almost every corn grower has had the experience of looking across a field of young corn and wondering how much damage was caused by the previous night's frost. Basically, survival of the growing point holds the key. If it is not damaged, chances for corn plant recovery are very good. Here's where you'll be glad you practiced observing growing points in normal undamaged corn

It will take two or three days for damaging growing points to deteriorate, so don't spend much time checking until then. If a growing point is discolored (brownish) or soft (rotting) that plant will not develop further, though it may not die. Plants with healthy growing points will likely recover and develop normally, especially if weather conditions are favorable for growth after the freeze. Growing points weakened by a freeze may not make it if it is cold or soils are soggy. Also, we have seen cases where killed leaves have made it difficult for new growth to emerge Sometimes mowing to remove the old growth has been helpful, but don't mow the growing point off.

Small plants, with their growing points at or beneath the soil surface, have an excellent chance of surviving one or moe moderate freezes and still developing normally Larger plants are more vulnerable to freeze damage because their growing points don't enjoy the insulating value of the surrounding soil. The best way to assess potential crop damage is to wait three days and then check for growing point damage Most growers will find their crop is in better shape than it looks but if appreciable damage is confirmed, replanting should not be delayed

Corn is not particularly tolerant of flooding and it is especially vulnerable if water covers the growing point for any length of time So, in case of high water, larger plants have a better chance of survival because their growing points are further above ground level

DeKalb has a bulletin on diagnosis of corn problems in the field For a copy write Wayne Fowler, DeKalb Ag Research Inc , Sycamore Rd , DeKalb, IL. 60115

Stauffer offering seed line for Pa.

WESTPORT, CT. — Stauffer Seeds, a recognized name in hybrids for central U.S. growing areas, is making a broad line of hybrid seed corn available to farmers in Pennsylvania.

The Stauffer Seeds brand line of hybrids adaptable to Pennsylvania growing conditions includes a wide range of early maturing yellow dent seed corn and Waxey corn hybrids.

Waxey corn, high in feed value, was developed to meet the specific needs of dairymen and livestock producers. Containing nearly 100 percent amylopectin starch, easier-digesting Waxey hybrids help improve milk and butterfat production. Of particular interest to area grain farmers is the premium price offered for Waxey corn in certain Pennsylvania test markets.

Highlighting the broad selection of hybrids offered to Pennsylvania farmers is Stauffer Seeds S4402 and S6595 yellow dent seed corn and B302WX and B606WX Waxey hybrids. Particularly adapted to southern growing areas in the state, 100-day S4402 shows early vigor at planting and fast dry down at harvest, while 110-day B606WX produces high yields under a wide variety of growing conditions. With deep kernel and small cob, 115-day S6595 is a top yielder under high populations in northern parts of Pennsylvania.

A consistent Waxey performer in northern areas is early maturing (95 days) B302WX hybrid, which combines high test weight with high feed value.

In addition to seed corn, the Stauffer Seeds line of hybrids includes sunflower, alfalfa and grain and forage sorghum. For further information on hybrids for Pennsylvania and the address of the nearest Stauffer Seeds dealership, contact Jim Dassow at (414) 898-4071. (Applications for Stauffer seeds dealerships are also being accepted.)

Stauffer Seeds, a division of Stauffer Chemical Company, is comprised of three well-known seed producers: Blaney Farms, Inc., of Madison, Wisconsin; Prairie Valley, Inc., of Phillips, Nebraska; and RBA, Inc., of Springfield, Illinois.

WE'RE NUMBER ONE!

Per Bale or Per Silo
Preserve Hay and Haylage Nutrients with BEACON PRE-SERV* Products!

If you use hay by the bale, Beacon Hay Pre-Serv lets you bale it at 25% moisture. This allows you to bale earlier in the day, later at night, and well before rain can damage it while drying. Baling at higher moisture levels means you get tougher hay with less leaf shatter . . .hay that cows definitely prefer, with as much as 20% more nutritional value!

If you ensile hay into hay crop silage, Beacon Silage Pre-Serv controls the fermentation process by speeding it up. Therefore, a stable silage condition is reached much sooner. Less heat is produced during the fermentation process. The reduced temperatures can lessen the chance of protein being heat-damaged.

That means more nutrients in the haylage where they can be used to make more milk And that means less feed to buy.

Hay Pre-Serv. Silage Pre-Serv. Both are blends of food-grade mold inhibitors, anti-oxidants and flavors. They improve palatability and digestibility while they reduce spoilage. And both are easy and inexpensive to apply. Find out more about these great products now. Per bale or per silo, you'll get more milk production, and that means more profits!

Sperry New Holland cites new round baler policy

NEW HOLLAND, — Sperry New Holland has announced it is providing a two-year or 5,000 bale "replacement policy" covering the upper apron chain on its round balers purchased after May 17, 1982

Sperry New Holland product manager Richard Salisbury says the company will provide this policy to the original purchaser and will replace the chain, including labor, for a period of one year of 2500 bales if the chain fails under normal use and maintenance. Replacement of the upper apron chain normally costs about $900.

The policy also provides a new chain, without labor, during the second year or an additional 2500 bales. Salisbury says this means Sperry New Holland will stand behind their upper apron chain for a total of two years or 5000 bales This chain replacement policy is subject to some exclusions.

"This additional protection for our customers is the result of constant improvements in round baler design in recent years," Salisbury said. "Covering a major component like the upper apron chain with this kind of policy is an indication of the strides that have been made in making round balers more reliable for farmers and ranchers "

Farm Credit cites changes

BALTIMORE, Md. — The Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore announce the promotion of Michael W. Ridgely to Assistant Vice President – Director of Systems and the appointment of John J. Maelhorn as Economic and Planning Analyst.

In his new position, Ridgely will be responsible for the analysis, design, and implementation of computer systems for the Banks and affiliated Federal Land Bank and Production Credit Associations.

Ridgely, a native of Baltimore, joined the Banks in 1981 as a Systems Analyst/Project Leader. He was previously employed by the PHH Group, and holds a bachelor's degree from Towson State University

A native of Baltimore, Malehorn previously served as Financial Economist - Regulatory Economics for the Minnesota Department of Public Service. He holds a B.S. in economics from the University of Baltimore, an M.A. in economics from Georgia State University, and has completed the course work toward his doctorate, also at Georgia State.

The Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore serve the states of Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. These states and Puerto Rico comprise the Baltimore District of the nationwide Farm Credit System The Baltimore Banks are the largest private agricultural lenders in the District, with a combined loan volume of $3 billion

Broiler advisory board meets

MILFORD, Ind. — Discussions on "meal" feeding and feed conversion, as well as present and future boiler feeding equipment needs, highlighted Chore-Time Equipment Inc.'s second annual Broiler Grow-Out Advisory Board meeting

Meeting at Chore-Time's Milford, Ind. headquarters, members of the board shared their ideas for more efficient broiler production practices during sessions with Chore-Time management and engineering staff Made up mainly of production managers from leading broiler firms, the unique grower advisory board provides grower-industry input into the production and marketing plans of the company, according to Dale Boyce, Broiler Industry Product Manager for Chore-Time.

Participating on this year's advisory board were· Jerome Winfrey, Broiler Production Manager for Fieldale Corporation, Baldwin, Ga.; Clark White, Production Manager for Paramount Poultry, Cargill, Inc., Frankford, Del.; Ralph Michelson, Live Production Manager for Jack Frost Inc., St. Cloud, Mn.; Monty Henderson, Live Production Manager for Pilgrim Industries of Arkansas, Nashville, Ark., Jim Calhoun, Live Production Manager for Draper Valley Farms, Mount Vernon, Wash.; Bill McPherson, Manager of Technical Services for Cobb Inc., Concord, Mass.; and Dr Allen Edgar, Poultry Science Professor and Poultry Pathologist from Auburn University, Auburn, Ala.

"We feel that by utilizing a grower advisory board, Chore-Time can remain close to the needs of the broiler industry and be more effective in meeting the broiler equipment needs of the future," Boyce said.

Chore-Time manufacturers automated equipment for the care and feeding of poultry and livestock, with worldwide distribution from its plants in Goshen and Milford, Indiana; Athens, Georgia; Decatur, Alabama; Modesto, California; and Maldegem, Belgium.

Berks Wool Pool June 12

LEESPORT — The Berks County Sheep and Wool Growers' Association announces its wool pool will be held Saturday, June 12 from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Bollman's Hat Factory, Adamstown.

The buyer of this year's wool is Chester Farms of Virginia. All producers are invited to market their wool through the pool. The price will be 45 cents a pound for all grades

Berks County Extension agent Clyde Myers emphasizes that since the wool will not be graded, the pool will not accept tags, contaminated wool, wool tied with baler twine, wool stored in plastic feed bags, or wet wool.

Other wool pools in southeastern Pennsylvania include: the Bucks-Montgomery Wool Pool, Tuesday, June 1 from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Railroad Freight Station, Doylestown; the Northampton Wool Pool, scheduled for Monday, June 7 from 7 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Northampton 4-H Center; and the Cumberland Wool Pool, scheduled for Sunday, June 23. For price information, contact the local Extension offices.

Federal gypsy moth funds increase

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The federal government will double its funding for this year's efforts to control gypsy moth infestations, U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has announced.

Block said he would shift 1982 appropriations from other programs of the USDA's Forest Service to make an additional $1.8 million available for supporting gypsy moth suppression activities.

These funds raise the total Forest Service contribution to about $3 6 million, or 25 percent of the total cost of combating gypsy moths on an estimated 974,000 acres in nine northeastern states. The states are Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

"Gypsy moths defoliated 12.8 million acres of hardwood trees last year, and this year it's estimated that 12 5 million acres will be attacked by these forest pests," Block said. "We feel this increase in funding will play a significant role in assisting states and counties now involved in suppressing gypsy moth outbreaks."

In addition to providing funding, Block said the Forest Service provides research and technical assistance to state agencies involved in gypsy moth suppression The Forest Service also provides coordination among the states for suppression activities

Block said the 1982 budget originally provided for a 12 5 percent federal contribution to the gypsy moth suppression program. The seriousness of the gypsy moth problem this year and the obvious need for assisting state and county efforts resulted in the decision to double the federal share, he said.

Outstanding Features

Thick walled for extra strength No spreader on the market has thicker walls 30 to 70% thicker steel than competitive spreaders
Adjustable relief valve maintains uniform pressure Prevents over pressurization of tank
Primary Shut-Off valve, plus a secondary shut-off provide more than adequate protection against liquids entering the pump
Big 512 cubic inch displacement pressure-vacuum pump is standard equipment Conservation-rated at 135 C F M of air at 85 to 90 percent vacuum for filling and will maintain 10 to 15 lbs of pressure for unloading or agitation in the pit
Open door models permit access for cleaning and easy maintenance
Walking beam suspension Standard on 2,600, 3 150 3,600 and 4,600 gallon models (Optional on 1,500 & 2,100 gallon models) Front & rear wheels on each beam follow contour of the ground, provides a smooth level ride
Flotation tires reduce soil compaction, let you spread on soft ground early in season
Massive frames resist the wrenching twisting jolting shocks of hard field usage year after year

Sizes - 800 gal. thru 4600 gal.
Both vacuum & augermatic spreaders for truck mount or trailer type

—SPECIAL—

COMPARE: Price/Performance/Durability

If you want a tough, dependable 5' rotary cutter at an affordable price, look no further than the Bush Hog Squealer

The Squealer's attractive price compares most favorably with cheaply built, competitive models

The Squealer is built for dependability – year after year

Rugged, all welded 11-gauge steel frame construction. Tapered rear discharge means less tractor horsepower is required.

Standard Category 1, three-point hitch makes hookup to your tractor fast and easy. Free-swinging blades, round blade holder, and a shear pin are standard equipment.

HAY DAY DEMONSTRATION

MAKIN' HAY THE Vicon WAY.

The Vicon KM-240 cuts and conditions the tallest, tangled, wettest, heaviest hay This new mower-conditioner eliminates a pick up reel, so you can put up more hay — FASTER With a working width of 7'10", it can mow twice as much area in a day as most competitive models Most competitors use a pick up reel, which limits ground speed, adds maintenance problems and allows leaf loss

The Vicon six-disc cutter bar feeds your crop directly, stem first, into rubber rollers that condition green hay or wet grass It dries faster and bales easier, saving time and labor

The KM-240 has no chains no belts, no sickle bar If you need only a mower, look at the Vicon CM-165 (4 dics - 5½' working width) or the CM-240 (6 discs 7'10" working width) Both make clean cuts in heavy grass or tangled crops

Ask your dealer to show you the Vicon KM-240 mower conditioner Cut your hay making down to size with VICON — the top cat in mower conditioners

THANK YOU!

ON OUR 40th ANNIVERSARY!

C. B. HOOBER & SON, INC.
Main Street
Intercourse, Pennsylvania 17534
(717) 768-8231

May 29, 1982

DEAR FARMER CUSTOMER,

I want to thank you for making this — the Spring of our 40th year — the best Spring we've ever had. Our sales for the first four months are the highest they have ever been. It is especially heartening to me and to all the other people who work at C.B. Hoober & Son Inc. that in these difficult times you, collectively, have had enough confidence in us that we could achieve this outstanding level of sales.

In the future we will continue to provide quality new products and the best Parts and Service support possible to back them up. We have brought quality new product lines into the East which enabled you to become more productive operators. In the same spirit which pioneered the large power and tillage markets with Steiger tractors and Krause rockflex discs, I gladly announce that we have also become the exclusive supplier of Versatile 4-wheel drive tractors in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey. In the next few weeks we will announce formally the addition of Versatile to our 4-wheel drive tractor lineup. Versatile fills the gap in the 200 HP class between the IH 2+2s and the Steiger Bearcat Class tractors at 225 HP. Versatile also gives us a tractor with a full power PTO from 200 HP to 350 HP. The addition of Versatile tractors to our product line enables us to be your complete 4-wheel drive headquarters.

Again accept my sincere thanks for your past business. Please watch our future ads in this newspaper informing you about our plans to celebrate our 40th Anniversary at a field day later this year. All of us at C.B. Hoober & Son Inc. look forward to providing you excellent service in the future.

Sincerely,
Charlie Hoober

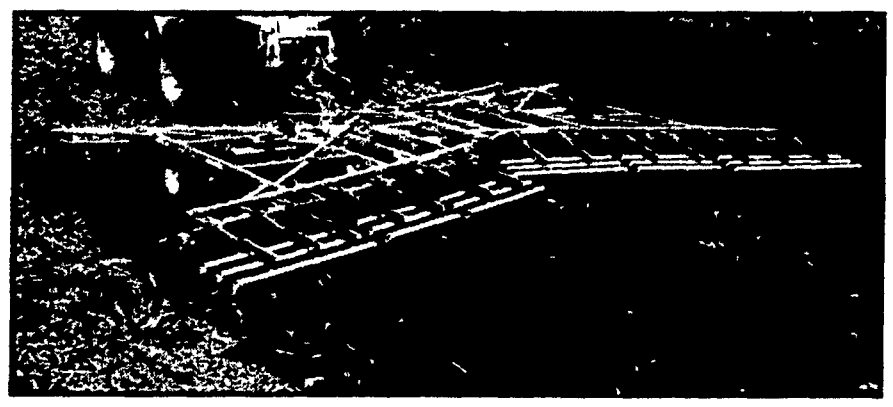
FARMER PREFERENCE HAS PROVEN THAT

Krause Discs Are Best



Whether the farmers buy their discs to cut or to finish, the Krause discs consistently perform better than the discs the farmers previously owned. And the Krause Rockflex design allows farmers to disc where they could not disc with their old discs without causing extensive gang damage. That's why the Krause Rockflex Disc became known as the disc that loves rocks.

But Now Krause Engineering Advances Make

Krause Discs Even Better

Some Improvements Made On 1982 Production Of Rockflex Discs Which Add To Their Performance And Reliability Are:

..."SUPERSEAL" REGREASABLE BEARINGS.
Still encased in rubber to reduce shock, the "Superseal" bearings are heavier for longer life and even better reliability.

..."SHOT-PEENED" ROCKFLEX BEARING ARMS.
The new "shot-peened" manufacturing process for the "rockflex" bearing arms will add double the life to the C-arm itself.

...ALLOY STEEL TIE RODS.
Special alloy steel tie rods are 30% to 70% stronger than the tie rods on many other brand disc harrows. They still have a nut on both ends for easy servicing.

...OPTIONAL HEAVY-DUTY DISC BLADES.
5/16"x24" Diameter blades — plain or notched — on 1740 and 2400 Series.
¼ x 22" Diameter blades — plain or notched — on 2200, 1530 and 1900 series.

NOW IS THE TIME TO TRADE-UP TO KRAUSE

Take Advantage Of The High Resale Value Of Your Used Krause Disc.

Ask Our Salesmen Why You Shouldn't Wait.

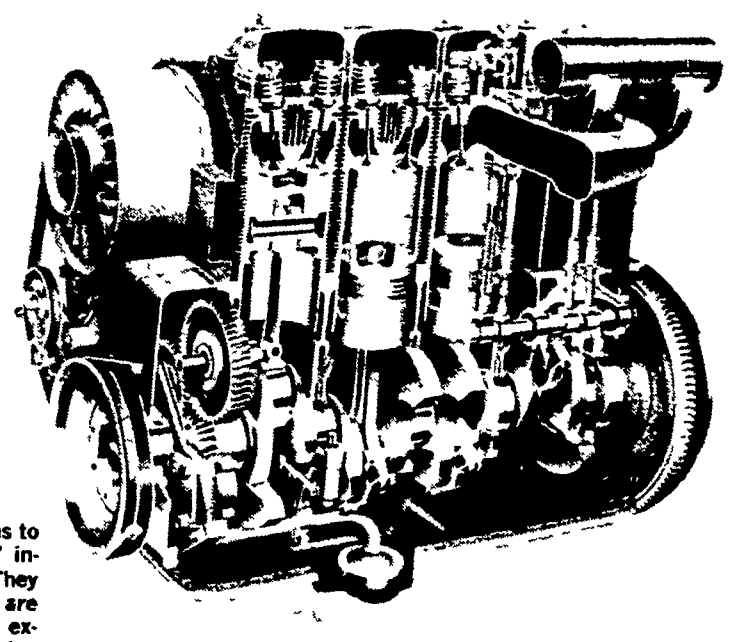
All air-cooled engines are NOT created equal

DEALER INQUIRIES INVITED
Some Dealer Areas Still Available In Eastern Pa.



It's easier to call an engine "heavy duty" than it is to build it that way. Many carburated "heavy duty" industrial engines simply don't deserve the title. They consume expensive fuel at an alarming rate: they are prone to break down or overheat and their life expectancy is measured in hundreds of hours. If any engine in the world qualifies as heavy duty, it's Deutz. Deutz engines are often chosen to power equipment with unit price tags over half a million dollars – that's heavy duty.

When it comes to cooling efficiency, the Deutz precision-engineered axial-flow cooling air blowers have no equal. This direct approach to cooling (without coilants, additives, cavitation) means our engines need only about 60% of the air volume liquid-cooled engines require. Combustion efficiency is greatly improved by higher head temperatures and engine life is extended by cooler oil temperatures.

If you think air-cooled engines are prone to overheat, talk to Deutz users in the scorching heat of the Imperial or San Joaquin valleys. There, Deutz engines deliver more than 20,000 hours of trouble-free service before a major overhaul

There are lots of things that separate Deutz engines from water-cooled and other air-cooled engines. Things like blower design, big lube oil coolers, oil-cooled pistons, special alloy cylinder heads, a research and development team of more than 1,000 engineers These are all important advantages. Still we say: If you can find an engine that uses less fuel than a Deutz – buy it

The Vicon KM-240 cuts and conditions the tallest, tangled, wettest, heaviest, hay This new mower-conditioner eliminates a pick-up reel, so you can put up more hay - FASTER With a working width of 7'10", it can mow twice as much area in a day as most competitive models Most competitors use a pick-up reel, which limits ground speed, adds maintenance problems and allows leaf loss

The Vicon six-disc cutter bar feeds your crop directly, stem first, into rubber rollers that condition green hay or wet grass It dries faster and bales easier, saving time and labor

The KM-240 has no chains no belts, no sickle bar If you need only a mower, look at the Vicon CM 165 (4 discs-5½' working width) or the CM-240 6 discs-7'10" working width) Both make clean cuts in heavy grass or tangled crops

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

1 Excellent bonding
2 High Density
3 Extreme strength and hardness
4 High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration
